One More Last Word Nothing Frightens Sarah Rockefeller Buildings Foolish Charles

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

You have read many "Last Words," Goethe's "More Light," Pitt's "My Country, How I Love Thee," Madame Roland's "Liberty, What Crimes Are Committed in Thy Name," etc. (Perhaps those were not her LAST words; you cannot be sure in the case of a woman).

Of all last words, none inspire more solemn thought than those of John Burroughs, dying on the train bringing him from San Francisco, "How far are we from home?"

"What are you, where did you come from, and whither are you bound?" This is the question that men have asked of each other and of the universe, as John Fiske says, ever since Homer's day. But it is the question of youth and philosophical energy.

In old age it is, "How far are we from home?" and there is no answer, except in faith, which fortunately supplies answers, complete and satisfactory, to the great majority.

Sarah Bernhardt is seventy-six years old. Her right leg was amputated six years ago. Next week she appears in London as Daniel, a lovesick boy of twenty-five in a new play. She will go from Paris to London by flying machine. That is what you may call defying time, danger and the surgeon. Foolish men and sometimes ask whether women are as brave as they, will please consider the case of the great Jewish actress.

The University of Chicago, its financial prosperity created by the Rockefellers, will spend fifteen millions for a new building, including one million and a half for a Rockefeller chapel, to be paid for out of a recent ten million dollar gift by Mr. Rockefeller, recently made.

In those buildings, with metal protected with paint that won't rust, foundations of almost perpetual concrete, what will be taught? What will be preached in that Rockefeller chapel two hundred or three hundred years hence? It would surprise us all to come back and hear. How big will Chicago be around that university, three hundred years hence? Bigger, undoubtedly, than any other city in the world. But as the flying machine develops, taking human bombs to their homes on the mountain tops in a few minutes, will there be any cities—anything but great office buildings and factories of steel and glass which the flying men and women will visit for a few hours each day, as the sea gulls visit their fishing grounds and fly home to the cliffs?

Foolish Charles, of Austria-Hungary, line has learned that empires are like fortunes. A fool may inherit, manage and lose one. It takes more than a fool to get it back.

He was boarding comfortably in Switzerland when they told him "his people were eagerly awaiting his return to power." Stupid, bankrupt, looted and mutilated, "his people" were awaiting him about as eagerly as a boy awaits his castor oil. So Charles went to Budapest.

The farmers demanded a law to keep out all Hapsburgs. The ruling premier, Horthy, was cold and would not be sent for. Charles called on him. He gave him the highest military decoration, the Cross of Maria Theresa.

But that royal trick has lost its power since Napoleon, inventing the Legion of Honor, could say: "I'll pin that red ribbon on a field of republican and make him a good imperialist." The only person excited about a red ribbon now is some New York banker, who shivers with delight and thinks it means something.

One month from this day, May 1, will be Labor Day in Europe. The returns will tell us how European labor is feeling.

In England, labor, even now, is not feeling peaceful. Coal miners announce their greatest strike and a new feature. They will take out the pump man, allowing mines to be filled and ruined. If they do not change their minds, many mines will be forever useless, never reopened, and many miners will have to learn another trade.

Lloyd George faces a situation in which British labor may do to England what Germans were unable to do.

Vivian, able Frenchman, is in America to learn what Harding will do about things in general. What he will be told was published in this column a few days before President Harding was inaugurated.

The first thing is to "scrap," not the League of Nations but the Versailles treaty, and make a new treaty based on common sense and the world's needs, not merely on intense hatred following a war.

The league, Europe would scrap willingly. For it means nothing without Uncle Sam's pocketbook and men. But the treaty is different. It means that the French and English for fifty or a hundred years can take every dollar as fast as the Germans earn it.

SINN FEIN WILL JOIN IN IRISH ELECTION

De Valera Says Candidates Will Be Put Up in Every Constituency

Dublin, April 1.—Nearly 500 persons were killed in Irish disorders during January, February and March, according to a casualty list compiled here today. They were listed as follows:

	Killed.	Wounded.
Crown forces	179	264
Civilians	319	286

By International News Service.

Dublin, April 1.—The Sinn Fein has decided not to oppose the British government's plan for an attempted solution of the Irish problem by holding elections in South Ireland for a new legislature, it was announced today by Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish republic.

In a public statement De Valera said:

"Dail Eireann (The Sinn Fein Parliament) has decided not to place a ban upon the elections in South Ireland for a parliament. The Sinn Fein will

RUSH TO BUY AS COAL PRICE IS REDUCED

Pottsville, Pa., April 1.—Announcement by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal & Iron Company of a reduction of fifty cents per ton on domestic sizes of anthracite was followed with a like action by other companies today.

This has resulted in such a rush of telegraph orders for coal, particularly from New England, that work will be resumed tomorrow at all the collieries. Not a wheel turned in the anthracite region today. The mines were closed during the eight-hour day victory.

LETTER FROM LYNAM MAILED IN MONTREAL

A letter has been received here from Ensign Joseph J. Lynam, the U. S. Chester paymaster who disappeared just before a $25,000 shortage in his accounts was discovered. It was mailed in Montreal, evidently by a friend. It is not believed Lynam is in Montreal. The letter stated that he was able to cash a check for $100 before the naval authorities could send out a stop order against the check in his possession.

35,000 BUILDERS ON STRIKE

The claim that 35,000 building trades workers throughout the State are now on strike and announcement that a general State-wide strike may be declared following a meeting of the Building Trades Council tonight, featured a statement today by E. A. Johnson, secretary of Boston Building Trades Council.

Granddaughter of Ex-Governor Elopes

By International News Service.

New York, April 1.—New York society was treated to an elopement sensation with its breakfast today.

Inez ("Lola") Gibbs, eighteen years old, one of the season's most beautiful debutantes, made her bow in the morning papers as the wife of nineteen-year-old William Leland Hayward, a Princeton student and son of Colonel William H. Hayward. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Governor Gibbs of Texas. They slipped over to Greenwich, Ct., Monday evening and had the proverbial knot tied by a justice of the peace.

At the Gibbs home it was said the cousin had been forgiven. They will make their home in Princeton.

STOLEN AUTO IS RIDDLED IN GUN FIGHT

Thief Abandons Machine in Norwood After Running Battle With Police

A daring auto bandit was forced to abandon a stolen machine on the Walpole road in Norwood early today after a running fight with Dedham and Norwood officers, in which he used a revolver and his pursuers a police riot gun.

The man leaped from the bullet-riddled auto not far from the Walpole line and escaped through the underbrush.

The automobile, the property of Carl H. Thorne, No. 235 Whitwell street, Quincy, was stolen as it stood at a curb in the Back Bay.

Eyewitnesses warned the owner and the police, and as the thief was out of sight in a moment telephone messages were sent broadcast in an attempt to head him off.

Dedham officers first caught sight of the bandit, racing toward Norwood, and shots were exchanged.

Dedham police telephoned ahead, and when the fugitive came through Norwood, Eugene McCarthy, a driver, gave chase in the police auto.

McCarthy had provided himself with a riot gun, and opened fire, the fleeing bandit returning it with a revolver.

At the end of a two-mile chase, after McCarthy had scored several hits, the fugitive brought the machine to a stop and fled.

BANDITS ROB BANK IN CHICAGO SUBURB

Chicago, April 1.—Three automobile bandits, fully armed, held up the Summit State Bank, in Summit, Ill., on the outskirts of Chicago, after the opening hour today, and escaped with between $8,000 and $10,000 in cash.

$7,500 PER MONTH TO WIFE OF BANKER

"Hysteria" Letter Ruled Out by Judge in Stillman Divorce Proceedings

By International News Service.

White Plains, N. Y., April 1.—Mrs. James A. Stillman was awarded $7,500 a month (or $90,000 a year) alimony and $35,000 counsel fee by decision of Supreme Court Justice Morschauser here today.

An additional $2,500 was granted her for additional expenses necessitated by her counter action against her husband's suit for divorce.

Mrs. Stillman in her counter action had asked $10,000 a month alimony and $75,000 counsel fee.

The now-famous letter written by Mrs. Stillman to her husband, the president of the National City Bank,

Bold Robbers Lug Safe From Store to Loot

One of the most daring robberies of recent months was reported to the police of East Boston today when Fred H. Wagner, manager of the Ginter Grocery store at No. 258 Bennington street, East Boston, found that the heavy iron safe, containing $110 in cash and a bank book on the Coumbia Trust Company has been stolen during the night and carried away.

The robbers had cut through a heavy wire screen covering a rear window, forced the window lock and then removed the safe and its contents.

In order to reach Prescott street, in the rear of the store, with their heavy booty, the thieves were forced to break down a fence.

The East Boston police believe that the robbery took place during the excitement following a trolley accident which resulted in the injury of a number of men and women. The Ginter store is near Day square, one of the best lighted and most active sections of East Boston, and the theory of the detectives working on the case is that the robbers took advantage of the fact that interest in the accident drew the usual crowd away from the vicinity of the store.

They point out that otherwise it would have been impossible for the robbers to carry away the safe, as a police call box is less than a hundred feet from the rear of the store, that four police beats converge there, and the box is polled every fifteen minutes during the night.

GAS FATAL TO CAMBRIDGE WOMAN

Miss Mary C. Healey, Aged 60, Found Dead in Bathroom by Relatives

Miss Mary C. Healey, sixty years old, a dressmaker, was found dead of gas poisoning in the bathroom of her home at No. 45 Crescent street, North Cambridge. The gas was turned on. She was fully dressed.

Her niece and nephew, Julia T. and Daniel Healey, found her on their return from the theatre.

They say she had not been ill or despondent and had no material worries.

Medical Examiner Dow has been notified.

GIRL IS SHOT BY SUITOR SHE SPURNED

Lucy Rothfelder in Critical Condition—Assailant Escapes Pursuers

New York, April 1.—Miss Lucy Rothfelder, twenty-three years old, No. 264 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street, a saleswoman in a Fifth avenue department store, is in a critical condition at the Women's Hospital, Amsterdam avenue and One Hundred and Tenth street, from a bullet wound in the abdomen.

She was shot, according to the police, by a suitor whom she had refused to marry.

The shooting occurred at Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Eleventh street about midnight this morning. The man who fired the shot and one who, the police believe, later tried to shoot himself in the head, escaped by running into Central Park at One Hundred and Tenth street. He was pursued by a crowd, but disappeared in the shrubbery.

Louis Cohen of Roxbury, assistant treasurer of the New England Piano & Phonograph Company, who eloped to Mexico with Miss Violet Bornstein, a blond employe of his firm, deserting his wife and child, was expected to reach Boston today, in custody of local police officers.

Cohen, who was arrested in San Antonio, Texas, was brought back by inspectors Patterson and Pierce to face trial on an indictment to fifteen counts, based on an alleged shortage of $4,000 from the piano and phonograph company.

His young woman companion, also a resident of Roxbury, who was arrested with him and released on her own recognizance, was said to be returning to her home alone.

Attorney John W. Connolly, counsel for the company, said Cohen had waived all legal rights in extradition, declaring that the charges against him were greatly exaggerated.

The elopement of the young couple caused a tremendous sensation when it was learned in February, following discovery of a shortage in the accounts of the piano and phonograph company. It was then found that Cohen had secured a passport for Mexico on January 13 for himself and wife, and later his wife and friends received telegrams from him sent from Mexico City.

VICTIM OF DUEL ON WHARF DYING

Three In Hospital and Two in Flight Following Quarrel Over Money

Three men were shot, one of them fatally, in the course of a pistol duel between two fishermen on the Eastern Packet Wharf, Atlantic avenue, today.

The injured:

Leonardi Sultero, 4 years old, of No. 11 Moon street, North End, shot through the left breast. Dying at Haymarket Relief station.

Leonardi Sultero, 40 years old, of No. 13 Moon street, North End, shot through the right wrist. May lose his hand.

L. Rudine, 34 years old, of No. 12 Moon street, shot through the throat, seriously wounded.

These men are under guard by police of the Hanover street station. The Harbor police boat, Watchman, chased two other men who fled in an open dory from the pier immediately after the shooting and later transferred to a power boat and started down the bay. They have not been arrested.

The duel started over a dispute between two partners on a division of the money obtained from the sale of a power fishing boat.

According to witnesses one of the partners whose name the police have not been able to obtain, began firing with a heavy automatic pistol at his mate.

The other returned the fire. More than four hundred Italian fishermen employed on the fleet of fishing craft that makes the pier its headquarters.

PROBERS WILL DEMAND NAMES IN THE ELEVATED EXPOSE

ALLEN TO BE ORDERED TO GIVE LIST OF BORROWERS

Hastened by Representative Martin M. Lomasney's sensational charges that the path of the Boston Elevated has been strewn with corruption for twenty-five years, the special probe committee today took its first steps in the sweeping investigation of alleged street railway legislation scandals in 1918 and 1919.

One of the first official acts of the committee will be to demand from Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen the names of members of the 1918 session alleged to have borrowed money from the closed trust companies on unsecured notes to gamble in Elevated and Bay State Railway stock when the rail bills were passing through the General Court.

LOMASNEY NAMES McKNIGHT

Lomasney charged in public debate on the floor of the House that Edwin T. McKnight, former president of the closed Fidelity Trust Company, was the "conduit" through which the Elevated and other financial interests operated to put the Elevated bill across and that because he was an "able seaman" in that matter the financial interests procured his election as president of the Senate the following year to secure the passage of the Cambridge tunnel bill.

The powerful financial interests which controlled the Elevated made up the same banking group which was behind McKnight in the Fidelity Trust Company, Lomasney charged.

Lomasney further charged that the Elevated interests had ravished the people, corrupted Legislatures and maintained men "to do certain things which have nearly put our judiciary in an improper position."

It is reported that Lomasney and Representative Martin Hays of Brighton, who first made the charge that the names of 1918 legislators would be found on the notes in the closed trust companies, will be among the first persons to be summoned before the probe committee.

Following the adoption of the probe order, President Allen of the Senate appointed Senator Lyman W. Griswold of Greenfield and Senator Walter A. Hardy of Pittsburg as the Senate committee and Speaker Young of the House appointed Representatives Henry L. Shattuck of Boston, James H. Brown of Everet and John W. McCormack of Boston as the House members.

They are vested with unrestricted power to summons any person and all papers and documents which may have any bearing on street railway matters.

1919 IS INCLUDED

As a result of Lomasney's charges, the investigation will be extended to include not only the legislators alleged to have dabbled in Elevated and Bay State stock, but the financial interests alleged by him to have been interested in the passage of the street railway bills.

The original order adopted by the Senate provided for a probe of the 1918 situation. When it reached the House, Lomasney moved to include 1919 and to retain Sherman L. Whipple as counsel for the probe committee. The 1919 amendment was adopted and the Whipple amendment rejected, both on a voice vote. The Senate immediately concurred in the Lomasney 1919 amendment.

None of the five probers served in 1918. Hardy was a member of the Senate in 1919. All are lawyers except Hardy, who is a Pitchburg manufacturer.

The "Big Chief" and some of his followers as seen by Harmony.

Hibernian Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury, was the scene of a "war whoop" dance in connection with the "powwow" of the old Ward Seventeen Tammany Club. The crowd "whooped it up for 'Big Chief'" Jim Curley for Mayor.

The function was attended by statesmen of the near and "has been" variety, all of whom dropped in to pick up information on the issues of the campaign, and to hear what the two ex-mayors, John F. and James M. had to say, and to see them shake hands publicly as Press Agent Glynn announced. In this he were disappointed. John F. was "unavoidably detained at home because of a bad cold."

"Big Chief" Jim Curley, as Press Agent Glynn announced, was good on the speechmaking line. He made two "good speeches on the coming issues," as Mike Welch, first custodian of the keys of the Tammany clubhouse, whispered to several city employes in a side room where cigars were handed out.

Curley promised a five-cent carfare, announced that there were 2,500,000 unemployed who would be put to work at the expense of the city after he was elected mayor next Fall. He prophesied that the jails would be filled if the proposed investigation of the "L" road should be carried out by the legislature.

"This Elevated steal went through while Peters was mayor," said Curley. "I'm a candidate whether thirteen candidates are in the field or not. I have 22,000 pledges. As mayor I'll get you a five-cent fare."

A souvenir issued at the "powwow" announced Curley's mayoralty candidacy. One paragraph reads:

"A combination of high brow realty sharks and low brow grafters will undoubtedly be again formed, and to combat these forces of evil the aid of all is essential. We have met them before and have been victorious. We welcome their opposition now, confident that the righteousness of our cause will insure success."

Fall River, April 1.—The Fall River Home Rule Committee has received a letter from the trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company asking for a conference with the purpose of taking up the question of a fare reduction in this city. The trustees desire to know how much fares can be reduced in this district.

BAXTER PLANS TO IMPEACH CLEAVES

Angered by Opposition of Utilities Board Head to Water Power Control

Augusta, Me., April 1.—Governor Baxter was reported today as about to start impeachment proceedings against Chairman Benjamin F. Cleaves of the Public Utilities Commission.

It was stated he would make his charge "undue political activity" because of Judge Cleaves' action a week ago in appearing as counsel before a legislative committee to oppose State control of water power and natural reservoirs.

Neither Governor Baxter nor Judge Cleaves would discuss this development in the feud which has arisen between them as a result of Cleaves' opposition to the Governor's pet project. Judge Cleaves has flatly refused Governor Baxter's request that he resign.

Friends of the Governor say that he will undoubtedly start impeachment proceedings in the Legislature unless he finds he can remove Cleaves through his executive council.

WARD 18 PLANS HONOR FOR DEAD WAR HEROES

Residents of Ward 18, Dorchester, have banded themselves in co-operation with the members of the Francis G. Kane Post, American Legion, into an organization named last evening the Francis G. WESTFIELD CHILDREN POOL PENNIES TO OBTAIN ETHER SPREES

DRUG SOLD FOR USE AS BEVERAGE

Foreigners, Slave to Habit, Monthly Purchase Thousands of Cans of Ether

Westfield, April 1.—School authorities of this city, backed by reputable physicians and druggists, are seeking legislation that will curb the free sale of ether, the evil effects of which were recognized when children under twelve years of age appeared in school stupefied from the anesthetic.

Unless legislation restricting the sale of this drug is effected, the authorities say they will be powerless to stop the spread of the habit which is fastening itself on the children of primary and grammar school age.

The sale of ether at local drug stores has increased so rapidly that the whole city is alarmed. With the possible exception of two or three stores, druggists are selling the drug knowing that the buyer is using it for illegitimate purposes.

It is as easy for a child to buy a can of ether in Westfield as it is to buy candy. This was demonstrated when Superintendent of School Stiles sent a seven-year-old girl to a drug store for a can of the liquid, which she was able to buy without a question on the part of the druggist.

WHOLE FAMILIES ADDICTS.

The users for the most part are Polish and German factory workers, who with their families, comprise almost one-fifth of the entire population of the city.

These residents, mostly in the Fort Meadow district, prefer ether to whiskey or other intoxicants. They allow their children to share the drug and, according to the city's officials, it is given by them not as a sedative, or medicine, but as a beverage.

An investigation by local authorities, which followed the arrest at school of a boy, aged seven, staggering under the effects of the drug, brought to light almost unbelievable conditions.

The investigation included the interrogation of a dozen or more children under twelve years of age, who at different times had come to school smeling of ether or under its effects, and an inquiry among the druggists.

POOL PENNIES TO GET DRUG.

These startling facts came to light:

1—Thousands of cans of ether are sold, mostly to women and children, to Westfield every month.

2—Parents allow children to drink the drug at will.

3—Ether parties among women in the Polish and German section of the city, at which the imbibers become semi-conscious, are every-day occurrences.

4—The other consumers will drink the drug in preference to whiskey or other intoxicants.

5—Children of some of the families will take ether in preference to candy, and it is known that children have pooled their pennies to buy the potent drug.

A reporter of the Boston American was present at the interrogation of the pupils by the school authorities. Every one of the children questioned had at some time within the past month come to school showing signs of ether indulgence.

DESCRIBE ETHER PARTIES.

Wan, emaciated, and with faces of a sickly, yellowish brown pallor, the children answered the questions in a half-frightened manner. Most of the pupils were little girls of ages varying from seven to eleven, and all of them were stunted in growth, hollow chested and delicate.

The children told of the ether parties, which their mothers arrange, where anesthesia in drunk, sometimes raw, sometimes in water, and other times in tea or coffee.

Hundreds of empty ether cans on the city dumps near the Fort Meadow section bear much testimony to the prevalence of drug taking among the residents of that section.

DENY EFFORT TO SETTLE DEAN CASE SUIT

Trial to Be Pushed Despite Postponed Hearing Assert Both Sides in Fight

East Jaffrey, N. H., April 1.—Abrupt postponement of the hearing for the taking of further depositions in the $10,000 slander suit brought by Judge Charles L. Rich against Selectman Edward C. Boynton gave rise in the rumor today that the suit, growing out of agitation over the Dean murder case, might be settled out of court.

This report was denied by both sides. It was explained that everything was in readiness to resume the public hearing in Town Hall yesterday, but that at the last minute one of the lawyers was unavoidably detained in another case in Concord. At a conference there counsel agreed to put off the hearing over until some day next week.

The hearing slated for last Friday was postponed also. Both hearings have been deferred by request of counsel for the plaintiff, it was said. Prior to the spirited session on March 11 there had been two hearings at which Attorney Robert C. Murchie, counsel for Selectman Boynton, took more than a score of affidavits.

These hearings have been largely attended by the townspeople. It had been planned to reach the trial of the suit in Superior Court at the April term but the frequent postponement are certain to defer trial until the May term at perhaps later. When asked today concerning rumors of settlement, Selectman Boynton said:

"There will be no settlement so far as I am concerned. This matter has gone too far. I intend to see it through to a finish."

R. I. FIGHT FOR SUNDAY MOVIES IS GROWING HOT

Backers of Measure Hope for Legislative Action Before Session Closes

Providence, R. I. April 1. — A determined fight for the passage of the measure legalizing Sunday moving pictures in Rhode island is being planned, despite protests from many churches and reform organizations in the State.

The opponents of the measure have been far more active during this session of the Legislature than ever before and many protests have been filed against it. At the present time charity moving picture shows are permitted in all parts of the State on Sundays. Several churches are also giving motion picture shows on Sunday, for which no admission is charged. It is understood, however, that collections are taken and the money received is used for charitable purposes.

Those who are backing the measure declare that if it is all right to run movie shows for charitable purposes such forms of entertainment are all right for profit.

The proponents of the bill are endeavoring to get the measure before the House before the session closes. It is expected that "trading" will have considerable to do with the fate of the measure.

Woman Revives After Heart Stops Beating

Milwaukee, Wis., April 1.—Several minutes after her heart had entirely stopped beating, and after she had been pronounced dead by the hospital authorities, Mrs. T. F. Gevers was restored to life here by a pulmotor rushed to her aid by the fire department.

The scientific miracle occured in the Milwaukee maternal and general hospital).

Mrs. Gevers, fifty two years old, wife of a well-known local business man, suffered a collapse while being operated on under an anaesthetic. Her supposedly dead body had been removed from the operating table and placed on a bed, pending funeral arrangements when the rescue squad of the fire department was telephoned for, and came speeding through the streets as if responding to an alarm.

DUANE PROBES CHARGES OF WOUNDED VETERAN

Haverhill, April 1.—State Commander James T. Duane of the American Legion announces that he will thoroughly investigate the experiences of James T. Munroe, wounded Haverhill war veteran, who recently left the Tilton Hospital, Rutland Island, N. Y., and returned to this city because of alleged ill-treatment there. Adjutant Tom Walker of Wilbur M. LAWRENCE COAL PRICE CUT TO $16.50 PER TON

Lawrence, April 1.—Lawrence coal dealers cut the price of hard coal today from $17.50 per ton to $16.50. A 50-cent reduction was made in the coal price February 21 by the dealers. The cut follows a cut by the coal companies of 50 cents.

IRISH FUND IS ENDORSED BY COOLIDGE

Congressman Frothingham Also Urges Aid for Suffering in Erin

Vice-President Calvin Coolidge today endorsed the drive for funds for the relief of the suffering people in Ireland, expressing himself as in accord with President Harding on the subject.

He said in part: "With the communication of President Harding wishing success in the effort to relieve distress among women and children in Ireland, I am in full accord. Whenever there has been reason to aid suffering humanity, the people of Massachusetts have been foremost in their response. They will be especially responsive to an appeal to relieve suffering among women and children of a race which has contributed so much to the defence and greatness of our Commonwealth."

GERARD TO SPEAK.

Congressman Louis A. Frothingham also endorsed the drive, saying, "I am glad to say that the American people have never failed in their duty to starving humanity, and am sure the appeal endorsed by President Harding will be met in a similar way."

Next Monday night a big meeting will be held at the Boston Opera House to stimulate interest in the drive, although no funds are to be collected there. The meeting will be open to the public, free. James W. Gerard, onetime ambassador to Germany, heads the list of speakers, which includes Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Lawrence Godkin and Senator David I. Walsh.

The South Boston committee of the drive has made plans to canvass the Peninsula district most thoroughly. Joseph A. Maynard, who had charge of many of the war-time drives, is head of the South Boston committee.

Women Work Harder Than Men

It must be so because Uncle Sam says so. A recent investigation of the unit "horse-power" against "man-power" and "woman-power" has proven beyond a question of doubt that woman is the greatest worker of the two sexes. How it is worked out is told and illustrated in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

MILLION STRIKE IN BRITISH MINES

London, April 1.—Great Britain was in the grip of a national coal strike today, for the second time in less than ten months.

The strike order was effective at midnight, but a split quickly developed in the ranks of the strikers. The pumpers and engineers in Scotland, South Wales, Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire decided to continue at work to prevent the mines from being flooded.

The leaders of the Federation of Miners had ordered all men to cease work regardless of the safety of the collieries.

It was estimgied that nearly one million miners obeyed the strike order. The government is prepared for drastic action under a royal proclamation issued by King George stating that an emergency exists.

STILLMAN 'APED' CABARET MATE OF MRS. LEEDS

Claim Banker Assumed Name and Place of Dancer in Girl's Affections

which his attorneys had characterized as "a confession," written "in a fatal as a "confession," was ruled out by Justice Morschauser.

The court also ruled out the letters alleged to have been written by Fred K. Beauvais, Indian guide, to Mrs. Stillman, which fell into the hands of the banker.

CHILDREN TO DECIDE.

Justice Morschauser ruled that the Stillman children, with the exception of 2½-year-old Guy, whose paternity has been questioned, shall decide for themselves as to whether they will live with their father or mother.

The temporary alimony of $90,000 a year is the largest amount ever granted in divorce proceedings in any court in the United States, the largest previous sum having been $50,000 a year in the Gould case.

In explaining his decision that the "hysteria letter" is not to be permitted in evidence in this stage of the proceedings, Judge Morschauser said:

"I hold that this communication is a privileged and confidential one—a letter from wife to husband.

"It was, therefore, not admitted in this particular proceeding."

"SEAL OF CONFIDENCE."

Mrs. Stillman's attorneys had objected to the introduction both of the alleged "confession letter" and the set of seven letters from Beauvais, said to have been received by the banker's wife and later to come into her husband's possession.

"It cannot be supposed," said Justice Morschauser, referring again to the "confession letter," "that both husband and wife would have been willing to discuss such a subject in the presence of other persons or would have consented to a repetition of the conversation by either party to it.

"It is nature and the relation of the parties forbade the thought of its being told to others, and of the law stamped it with that seal of confidence which the parties in such a situation would feel no occasion to exact."

BARS "HYSTERIA LETTER."

Justice Morschauser cited a number of cases in support of his ruling which bars the "Hysteria letter" and the Beauvais notes from introduction as evidence.

He said that the rulings in these cases showed that "Those living in the marriage relation should not be compelled or allowed to betray the mutual trust and confidence which such relation implies," and he added that "Communications between and wife are within protection of the rule as are oral communications and the privilege thereof cannot be disclosed unless the privilege is waived."

The additional $17,500 allowed Mrs. Stillman is to defray her expenses in bringing witnesses from distant points and to cover other financial burdens imposed upon her by the proceedings.

VICTORY FOR WIFE.

The decision was generally interpreted as a material victory for Mrs. Stillman. While it does not grant her the full amounts she had asked for alimony and counsel fees, the sums allowed her are regarded as liberal. It gives her $90,000 a year alimony.

Moreover, it rules out as evidence the document upon which her husband attorneys had let it be known hinged the whole case, the alleged "confession letter." The Beauvais letters also were to be ruled out as far as strong evidence.

The amount of temporary alimony granted Mrs. Stillman—$90,000 a year—is $40,000 more than her husband's attorneys had regarded as "Reasonable." De Lancey Nicoll, senior counsel for the banker, had declared that Mr. Stillman would not object to paying $50,000 a year temporary alimony.

The documents ruled out by Justice Morschauser were ordered sealed and withheld from the public for the time being.

A significant paragraph in the Justice's decision was one pointing out that Mrs. Stillman does not ask for a divorce, but "Does plead recrimination on the part of her husband," the decision says," added the Justice, "that Mr. Stillman was guilty. Now what then, if both parties are equally guilty? Having had their day in court, neither would be entitled to a divorce."

Charge Stillman Took Name of Another Man

New York, April 1.—Into the welter of conflicting claims, evidence and argument that is the Stillman divorce tangle, there came today a new and startling element.

Franklin Harold Leeds, heretofore accepted as a mere pseudonym used by James A. Stillman, National Bank president, in his affair with Florence Lawlor or Florence Leeds, is a real flesh and blood person—indeed he will be produced in court, according to intimations filtering through the wall of secrecy from sources close to the banker today.

Leeds, of the Secret Service," replaced the real Franklin Harold Leeds as "Mr. Leeds, the chicken of the Century Roof" took up her residence in the luxurious Eighty-sixth street apartment, according to best information obtainable today.

SHARED APARTMENT.

About this time, it is said, the real Harold Leeds, Jr., husband of the only a male member of a Broadway chorus can be, dropped from sight. He danced and sang in several Broadway shows, according to information gathered in the theatrical district. He was in the cast of one of George W. Lederer's productions and also appeared at the Winter Garden in "Sinbad."

Whether this dapper chorus Apollo was married to the Florence Lawlor, Chamberlain daughter and chorus "chicken," could not be ascertained. It was learned, however, that he made his start in the theatrical world at Murray's Cabaret in Newark, N. J., where Florence Leeds also made her first appearance. During this period, it was learned also, he shared an apartment with the plumber's daughter in Academy street in Newark.

Detectives working for both husband and wife in the divorce proceedings were busy today attempting to trace the missing chorus man. It is thought that Stillman himself is primarily interested in disproving Mrs. Stillman's charge that he is the father of Jay Ward Leeds, infant son of the former "chicken," and that the real Leeds is sought for this purpose.

ASSUMED ANOTHER NAME.

In this connection it is intimated that the evidence is at hand that even after the middle-aged, bald-headed banker met the former service" understudied the youthful chorus man as

U. S. OWNERSHIP OF ROADS SEEN BY 1923

Startling Condition of Lines Shown to Harding at Conference

Washington, April 1.—Government operation of the railroads before the end of the year may be forced upon a reluctant administration as the only means of preventing an economic disaster.

This opinion was freely expressed here following a conference between President Harding, R. M. Barton, chairman of the Railroad Labor Board, and E. E. Clark, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The gravity of the present transportation crisis was detailed to the President by Barton and Clark in a conference that lasted more than two hours.

As a result, the President is to launch in the near future a thorough investigation into the whole subject of transportation. It is believed even in some circles generally favorable to private operation of the roads is understood to have been subdue the immediate need of government operation.

Preliminary data regarding the alarming financial condition of the roads is understood to have been submitted to the President by the heads of the five government boards, as well as living conditions of the railroad employes as affected by wage schedules.

Following his conference with Barton and Clark, the President received Secretary Weeks, who is a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate, and conferred with him on the railroad situation. The President is said to have informed him that in his regard the railroad crisis as one threatening the industrial welfare of the nation.

Recently completed tabulations of earnings statistics submitted to the President showed that more than half the railroads in the country expensive and taxes during January. For the single month the roads gave more than $44,000,000 to earn the amount of revenue estimated would be required to meet increase granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission last year under the section of the Esch-Cummins law providing for a level of earnings to guarantee a five and a half per cent return.

GRACE ELWELL SAYS SLAYER IS SHIELDED

Sister of "Whist King" Believes Authorities Know Identity of His Murderer

New York, April 1.—Miss Grace Elwell declared today that for some time the members of the Elwell family have suspected that the name of the person who murdered her brother, Joseph Bowne Elwell, was known to the authorities and that powerful influences shielded him.

Miss Elwell spoke for herself and her step mother, Mrs. J. S. Elwell, at their little cottage at No. 28 Liberty street, Ridgewood, N. J.

"It pains us to have this terrible affair again come to the front in the newspapers," she said. "We had hoped that nothing more would be said until the mystery was cleared and the murderer of my brother brought to justice to pay the penalty of his crime.

"Since the murder of Joe, my father has died and his death can be laid directly at the door of the assassin of my brother. He has two deaths to account for.

"The terrible shock of Joe's murder and father's death has almost made mother an invalid, and it is with difficulty that we are enabled to keep up her spirits.

"We have even been pestered by the motion picture producers to permit the name and the plot to be used for a romance. They offered us $25,000 for the privilege, but we turned down the offer flat."

District Attorney Swann said today he was prompted to turn over the investigation to Charles S. Whitman, because of the great public interest that was attached to the Elwell case.

When told that members of the Elwell family had expressed the opinion that the slayer of Elwell was known to the authorities and was being shielded because of rich and powerful influence, he said:

"If that is true we would be only too glad if they would make known to us what they know.

$400,000 CUT IN NEW HAMPSHIRE BUDGET

Manchester, N. H., April 1. — Cuts approximating nearly $400,000 were made in appropriations for State institutions when the appropriations committee reported on twenty-nine different measures.

Among the drastic cuts which will vitally affect the progress of the State is one of $10,000 for treatment of advanced cases of tuberculosis, $188,000 for improvements at the State Hospital, $112,500 for the State college, a cut of practically 50 per cent.; $75,000 for stamping out the diseases of domestic animals, a cut of practically 50 per cent.

MALDEN MAN WINS IN LAWRENCE AUTO SUIT

Lawrence, April 1.—A verdict for the defendant was ordered by the Superior Court in the case of Norman Elliott of this city against William J. Batchelder of Malden and his daughter, Ruth K. Batchelder, for $2,000.

The Lawrence man claimed that his machine had been parked near the College of the Assumption, Wellesley, while he and his family were attending graduation exercises. When he returned he found his machine at the bottom of the Incline, smashed against some boulders. He alleged that the defendant's machine, driven by his daughter, had caused the damage.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub in in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

12,000 MEN JOIN WALKOUT IN FIVE CITIES

Builders Refuse Cuts in Woburn, Lawrence, Worcester, Holyoke and Springfield

The building trades strike, that has kept 16,000 workers idle in Greater Boston for about three months, assumed State-wide proportions today, when reports were received from other cities that 12,000 men had walked out.

It was expected that this total of 28,500 would be further increased as workmen in still more cities went on strike rather than accept the wage cuts announced by employers.

Worcester reported 5,000 walked out rather than accept the twenty percent. wage cut announced. The majority of the union councils decided upon the strike.

More than 1,000 men struck in Holyoke.

Builders in Springfield and Woburn also laid down their tools.

Lawrence reported 3,000 men in a walkout there in protest against the wage cuts made by the master builders. Eugene Laravee, secretary of the trades council, said the matter was up to the employers. Men were ordered back to work for concerns which did not put the cut into effect.

The Lawrence situation is a serious one because of a building boom. Forty-five construction permits were issued in March, besides twenty alteration permits, the whole involving an expenditure of $431,475.

The wage cuts in the various lines of building crafts in Lawrence follow: Stone and brick masons, $1.12½ to 90 cents; masons' helpers, 70 cents to 56 cents; plasterers, $1.12½ to 90 cents; plasterers' tenders, 90 cents to 72 cents; plumbers, $1 to 80 cents; steamfitters, $1 to 80 cents; plumbers' helpers, 80 cents to 48 cents; painters, $1 to 80 cents; electricians, $1 to 80 cents; electricians' helpers, 80 cents to 64 cents; roofers, 95 cents to 76 cents; building laborers, 65 cents to 52 cents; carpenters, $1 to 80 cents.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THE GROWTH of the modern news reel makes one of the most interesting stories of the movie industry," E. B. Hatrick, general manager of the International News, said a short time ago.

Nine years ago the International started out to get real "news" in picture form, but they picked out quantities of uninteresting material to run with the items of interest. The men who took the pictures were chosen from among the movie men of those days, and there was no question what they knew about the camera, but it was evident that they had no "noses for news."

After that they took newspaper photographers who knew what the public wants and how to get it. Today in nearly all the large cities of the United States there are operators and correspondents stationed, who go about taking pictures of the events that take place in their territory.

In 1914 the Duchess of Marlborough came over here to speak for woman suffrage. When it was suggested that the camera man take pictures of her making a speech, she almost gave up the campaign. On the other hand, in 1918, the treasury officials postponed for a day the opening of a new liberty loan until the camera man could get back to Washington to take movies of the scene.

CAMERA MEN RUSH IN WHERE ANGELS, ETC.

THE CZARINY of inducing the Sultan of Turkey to pose once to E. C. Wallen, International News man in that country. The Grand Vizier sent word that the Sultan would enter one of the rooms of the palace at such and such an hour and for the camera man to be ready.

At the appointed time the operator was ushered into a room with drawn curtains, and in a few minutes the Sultan came in. Wallen walked to the window and yanked the hangings aside, letting in a flood of sunshine. When he turned he found that the Sultan, enraged at this breach of etiquette, had turned on his heel and left the room.

"Tell that man to come back!" Wallen roared, "or I'll take no picture!"

His audacity so impressed the Sultan that he came back and posed for fifty feet of film. The next day he conferred on Wallen the medal of Fine Arts.

CAMERA CLICKS.

ANOTHER FAMOUS bathing beauty has given up slapstick for more serious acting, following in the steps of Gloria Swanson, Alice Lake, Mary Thurman and others. Marie Prevost has left the beaches of the Mack Bennett company and will be featured by an independent producing company.

KATHERINE BILLIKER, who has re-filmed the continental film, "Passion," has been chosen to write the subtitles of the futuristic picture, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which will be shown in New York very soon.

"ONE WONDERFUL THING," in which Jeanne Eagels starred on the stage a season or so ago, has been bought for Norma Talmadge. It will be her next production after "The Sign on the Door."

EDNA WHEATON of Ithaca, N. Y., an eighteen-year-old music student who had come to New York city, was chosen as the ideal type to play the role of "Beauty" in the Paramount super-special, "Experience."

ANOTHER VISITOR to a New York school was chosen for the role of "Charm," in this same production. She is Juliette Hensel, of Detroit. They claim that their screen appearance will only be in the nature of a specialty, and that both will return to school as soon as the filming is finished.

LURID CORDWOOD FIRE ALARMS ARLINGTON

Hundreds of telephone calls poured into Arlington as the result of a cordwood fire, the reflection of which led many people to believe the entire town was ablaze. While the flames loomed big, actual damage was small. The cordwood was piled outside the plant of the Arlington Foundry Company, Lake street, on the shore of Spy Pond. Someone is believed to have set a match in the highly inflammable wood. The opportune direction of the wind saved the plant from destruction.

came running up at the sound of the shooting.

One of the bullets, flying wild, struck Sultero in the left breast, and he staggered and would have fallen into the bay had not friends supported him.

At the Relief Station doctors declared that he was dying.

When the police of the Hanover street station arrived on the spot they could find few witnesses to the duel. These they took to the station, where, without exception, they all refused to talk.

Half an hour after the shooting Figuera and Ruzzo arrived at the hospital and asked for treatment. Neither of them would say a word in response to the questions of the police.

In the mean time word had been flashed to the police of East Boston that two men, believed to have been the duelists, had started from the pier in a dory, rowing toward the Narrow Gauge wharf at the foot of Marginal street.

Two patrolmen of the East Boston force were rushed to the wharf in an auto to head off the men, but on reaching there learned that the rowers had transferred to a power boat in the bay and had started for Castle Island.

The harbor police were notified and the police boat Watchman, stationed at Long Island, began a search of the bay for the missing men.

ITALY JOINS IN WAR THREAT TO HUNGARY

Czecho-Slovakian minister at Budapest, in behalf of the "Little Entente"—Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugo-Slavia—had notified Hungary that a blockade would be imposed and military demonstration made along the Hungarian frontiers unless Charles left the country immediately. If the warning is disregarded the "Little Entente" will employ stronger measures.

The ambassadorial council was reconvened this afternoon and drafted the Hungarian note, following the receipt of official advices from Hungary that the situation there was serious. The motion to send a note was made by M. Cambon, the French representative. It was recalled in the note that the Hungarian government and the people were pledged not to restore the Hapsburgs.

"The allies will neither recognize nor tolerate the restoration of the Hapsburgs," it was stated. "The allies count upon the Hungarian government to prevent this criminal attempt, which would have disastrous consequences for Hungary."

Despite advices from Vienna that the attempted monarchist coup had collapsed and that Charles would return to Switzerland at once, the Berlin correspondent of the Daily Express reported today that "Charles was determined to march upon Budapest at the head of the Hungarian army."

Austria has decided to put no bar in the way of the return to Switzerland and has so notified Hungary and Switzerland, said a Vienna dispatch to the Daily Herald.

Horthy Reported to Have Quit Regency

London, April 1.—It is reported that Admiral Horthy, regent of Hungary, has resigned in favor of former King Charles, said a Reuter dispatch from Budapest today.

The following Havas dispatch was received here quoting a Budapest telegram to the Frieburger Nachrichten: "Admiral Horthy has surrendered his powers to Charles. Several garrisons have joined the monarchist cause, acclaiming Charles. It is authoritatively reported that royalist troops are marching upon Budapest, carrying banners with portraits of Charles. Count Andrassy has been named Premier by the royalists and has sent an ultimatum to Budapest."

Former King Charles was disguised with a false beard and wore an entente uniform when he slipped across the Swiss frontier into Austria, according to a Geneva dispatch to the Daily News today. Charles left Switzerland one week ago today, traveling into Alsace by way of Strasbourg. According to a Geneva dispatch to the Daily Herald, Charles used a passport made out to a "British Red Cross worker."

$700,000,000 INCOME TAX PAID MARCH 15

Washington, April 1.—Payments of income tax, due on March 15, have thus far amounted to more than $700,000,000, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced today. This sum exceeds by $125,000,000 the amount of money which was necessary on March 15 to meet maturing indebtedness the secretary said, and is now available for other treasury needs.

Boy Dies After Being Denied Ambulance

Worcester, April 1.—Use of the Webster ambulance was refused to carry Clarence Goodnow, sixteen years old, from Oxford to Worcester City Hospital. A recent Supreme Court ruling declared the operation of an ambulance by the town of Webster to be illegal. The boy was taken to the hospital in a private automobile after considerable delay.

At the hospital his father furnished two quarts of blood for transfusion after the boy's right leg had been amputated, but this sacrifice was in vain for the boy died soon after the operation. The injuries were received when he jumped from a train before it stopped at Maynard Crossing.

SOUTH IRELAND WON'T OPPOSE ELECTIONS

put forward a candidate in every constituency, confident that the people will elect none but republicans.

"If Premier Lloyd George wanted peace he could have had it upon the basis of right and justice. We were willing to adjust matters not by clashes but through negotiations and a treaty.

"Premier Lloyd George has never shown that he was prepared to deal with Ireland in the only way possible—namely, as a question between moral equals."

In a previous statement to the International News Service de Valera had said:

"The English are actually waging war upon us. It is not only an unjust war but a barbarous war. Protected by the most modern appliances the troops shoot down and kill the people; they burn, loot and outrage.

"Why should it be wrong for us to see that they shall not do it with impunity. For us not to use the element of surprise and self-defence would be stupid. Only peoples ignorant of the circumstances and blinded by partisanship who half think or do not think at all talk as if it was something inherently criminal to ambush the English government's armed forces."

The elections in South Ireland will be held under the Partition act (the Irish home rule bill), which provides for the creation of two parliaments, one in North Ireland; the other in South Ireland. It was to the South Irish election that de Valera referred.

MIKE O'LEARY, V. C., JOINS NEW YORK JOBLESS

New York, April 1.—"O'Flaherty, V. C.," is with us. Michael O'Leary of Macroom, County Cork, proclaimed the bravest man in the British army during the great war, "hero" in Bernard Shaw's book and wearing a Victoria Cross, is registered with the Knights of Columbus employment service here.

At Glyenchy, February 1, 1916, he killed eight Germans and took fifteen prisoners.

"But since then my wife had twins and there's little nourishment in the Victoria Cross," he said today. He is entitled to ten pounds a year as a winner of the cross, but, he says, "I have to fill out fifty pounds worth of forms to get it, and life's too short."

So now he wants a job so he can feed the twins.

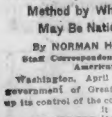
HAPGOOD SEES U.S. FORCED TO TAKE ROADS

Problem Up to Congress Is Method by Which They May Be Nationalized

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, April 1.—Today the government of Great Britain gives up its control of the coal mines, which it took over during the war. Certain bad results of the return to private control are already apparent, for a mining crisis is at hand. We are not so far from a coal crisis ourselves, and we have forbidden the Federal Trade Commission to continue publishing the facts—ostrich tactics prevail.



Norman Hapgood

The attitude of the British public toward government ownership of those industries which are essential to all the people and which are in their nature monopolies differs from the attitude here. It differs in having become more clarified, and in having a larger part of the ruling class in favor of public ownership, which they call nationalization. However, the rapid break-down of the system of private ownership in one of our great key industries, the railways, is likely to in this country precipitate the whole question rapidly.

Probe by Congress Means Many Receivers

President Harding has taken up the railroad situation and it is expected that he will move rapidly. The best indication that he will move rapidly is that he cannot help it. Nobody can see today how a large part of the railroads are going to pay the interest on their bonds that falls due July 1. If anybody wants a safe bet let him wager that there will be rather stormy railroad weather around the latter part of June.

Another change being initiated by Ideas. The solid trains of voluntary are devoted to goods to be shipped in car-load lots. There are also being established through shipping days, providing for the same treatment of goods sent in less than car-load lots.

Senator Cummins has given notice that as soon as Congress meets, which is April 11th, he will press his resolution for an investigation of the reasons that the roads have made such a bad showing since their return to private control. That investigation cannot be like most Congressional investigations, if it is to accomplish anything before a large part of the roads go into the hands of receivers.

Expects McAdoo's Aid in Rail Problem

In opening up this article by a reference to the coal crisis in Great Britain, it might as well be realized that in no country will the coal question be handled ultimately in a different way from the railroad question, and shipping will be tied up with the other two. The shipping interests thought they were doing something highly smart when they emasculated McAdoo's bill to get the government into the shipping business, but they merely won one of those victories that make the situation worse and soon show more clearly than ever the rightness of the defeated plan. I shall not be surprised if Mr. McAdoo comes out before long with a constructive suggestion about the railroads.

Mr. Asquith will do to illustrate what I said about the point that has been reached by public opinion in England on this subject of nationalization. Approaching the question of nationalization of the mines he is against it, but on what ground; simply on the typically English ground that it is well to try one thing at a time, and he believes the government would do better to take the railroads over first, as the problem is in some ways simpler.

Include Coal and Lumber Ownership

Whatever they may try to do at first the administration and Congress will soon be driven to select a method by which the government can take over the roads. The best method is one by which the lawyers and managers are passed over and the dealings are direct between a government corporation and the security holders. Such a plan has been perfected. It is backed even by some of the bankers who have mind enough to see what a precarious condition railroad securities are in. It, or something closely resembling it, will have to be accepted within the year.

Jap Propaganda in Hawaii Aims for Native Revolt

The eleventh installment of the article on the Japanese "invasion" of Hawaii by Joseph Timmons, printed in the Boston American today, shows how the schemes of Nipponese strive to stir up racial revolt in the American islands. Their propaganda involves a hypocritical semblance of friendship for negroes and other colored peoples that causes thoughtful persons to sound an alarm.

By JOSEPH TIMMONS

"Unless the peaceful penetration of Hawaii and the mainland by the Japanese is absolutely stopped I fear that this new race problem which we are permitting to grow up within our country will coalesce with our negro problem and that the two combined will destroy the American Nation."

That statement was made to me, not casually, but with grave emphasis, by the most scholarly man I met in the islands. He is a student, a thinker, a man of practical affairs, in no sense a "fan" nor an alarmist. He pledged me not to quote him, but I trust the time will come soon when he can speak out boldly and tell the American people the truth as he sees it.

Japan has entered upon a deliberate and world-wide campaign to stir the colored races against the white race, not because the Japanese have any love for other colored races, but for the sole purpose of using them to forces recognition of "racial equality," so that her lowly millions may have free access to our Pacific Coast.

Propaganda Spreads Through Hawaii

In Hawaii this colored race propaganda is assuming a sympathetic attitude towards the native Hawaiians. The natives, and to some degree the part Hawaiians, have an innate and entirely natural resentment against the whites, who have reaped most of the benefits of material progress in the islands. They do not like the Japanese, nor do the Japanese like them, but they have that one common ground; there can be no doubt that the Japanese will use it when the time comes for them to dominate politics in the islands through combinations with the political leaders of the Hawaiians and part Hawaiians. On the mainland this phase of the problem is much graver. As in India the Japanese are giving every possible encouragement to revolt against Great Britain, so in the United States they are encouraging discontent among the negroes.

Japanese delegates attended the international negro convention held in New York in January, 1919—the convention promoted by Marcus Garvey to advance the cause of the "Greater Liberia Republic."

Shuichi Mitoro, New York correspondent of Osaki Asahi and Tokyo Asahi, two of the leading Japanese dailies, with nearly 500,000 circulation each, declares the ultimate purpose is to unite all colored races.

In California the Japanese made a direct appeal for negro support against the alien land law. In Los Angeles a "Captain" P. N. McKinney, a negro, formed the "American League for Democracy," a negro organization, with offices at 204-205 Wilson Building. It sent out literature against the alien land law furnished it by the Japanese Farmers' Protective Association, this latter formed for this campaign. McKinney himself lectured and worked among the negroes against the alien land law, using the argument that negroes and Japanese must stand together against the injustices of the whites.

Los Angeles Negro Lionized by Japs

Of course, Japanese money paid for McKinney's campaign. The "captain" was a soldier in the Philippines. He has gone back to Manila. A letter from him, published in the California Eagle, the Los Angeles organ of the Liberian movement, in its issue of January 29, McKinney tells of a wonderful reception given him in Yokohama and Tokio by prominent Japanese in recognition of his work for the Japanese cause in California.

Asian Review is the only English language periodical published in Tokio by Japanese. It has the support of nearly all prominent Japanese, as a means to bring about American and European "understanding" of the Japanese point of view in international affairs. Such men as Marquis Okuma contribute to it. I have authentic information that it goes regularly into the hands of radical negro leaders in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

In the January number Tsunego Baba, editor of Kokumin Shimbun, a leading Tokyo daily, writes in an article on the California question:

"The contention of the Japanese nation is comparatively simple and clear. We must not be treated as a nation inferior to any other in the world. We desire the freedom to go without restraint to any part of the world."

And again:

"We cry for racial equality, not for the sake of our dignity, but for the sake of the maintenance of the existence of our race."

In number 7 of volume 1 of Asian Review, published last Autumn, are two editorials of significance, on "Treatment of the Negroes in the United States" and "Awakening of the Negroes." In the latter the editor says:

"The awakening of the much persecuted negro race cannot but be a matter of supreme satisfaction to the Asians."

The publication is violently anti-Christian and pro-Buddhist.

MORE FIRE CAPTAINS FOR WORCESTER

Worcester, April 1.—Mayor Peter F. Sullivan today signed an order adopted by the city council providing for the appointment of two captains to each Worcester fire company subject to confirmation by the board of aldermen and to the requirements of the civil service rules. This will give the lieutenants in the department additional compensation of 25 cents per day after they are qualified as captains. The order resulted from the establishment of the two platoon system.

120,000 TREES ORDERED FOR WORCESTER

Worcester, April 1.—Water Commissioner George W. Batchelder has ordered 120,000 pine trees from the State forestry division to be planted on the slopes of Pine Hill reservoir. The trees are furnished free by the State.

U. S. DEMANDS RESPECT FOR HER RIGHTS

No Surrender of Interests Anywhere, Warns State Department Note

Washington, April 1. — The new American world policy of the Harding administration is set forth in a State Department communication which probably will be submitted to the cabinet meeting for discussion today.

This note, it was learned, will serve notice upon all nations that the United States does not propose to surrender any American rights anywhere. Furthermore, it was stated, the communication must be construed by all nations as notice that the United States will be prepared to make that policy good.

The declaration obviously will go much further than the direct claims of former Secretary of State Colby in his note to the Council of the League of Nations on February 21. Mr. Colby at that time stated in the most unqualified terms that the United States had an equal right with the Allied and associated powers in every square foot of the former German overseas possessions. He asserted the rights of the United States in lands held by the Allies under mandates, and in the Island of Yap.

The Council replied, admitting that the United States was a large factor in the winning of the war and that the rights it had acquired were "not likely to be challenged in any quarter." But at the same time it contended that consideration of America's claims was "complicated" by the fact that she had not ratified the Treaty of Versailles with the League of Nations covenant.

It was stated that the question raised by the Council when it reminded this government that it had no standing in court, because it had not joined the League of Nations, is the issue which the new administration note is to meet squarely.

SUN IS TO SHINE FOR SEVERAL DAYS IN BOSTON

Two or three days of clear, sunshiny weather are expected by the weather bureau, following a dip in the mercury today. The temperature was 38 at 1 a. m. and by 8 o'clock it had dropped to 33, where it stayed three hours. It is hoped it is expected to fluctuate between 28 and 42. It will be warmer by Saturday, with fresh northerly winds switching to the south.

ATTACK ON POSTAL SERVICE WINS PRIZE

New Bedford, April 1.—First prize of $25 in the contest conducted by the Union Postal Clerk, official journal of the postal clerks, for the best essay on "If I Were Postmaster-General" has been awarded to Deindal Shea, president of the Carriers' Association here. Mr. Shea came into the limelight two years ago by his criticism of postoffice inspectors. His essay continued the attack.

Rich Food and Self-Indulgence Cause of Society Scandals

Science has traced many of the divorces, infelicities and other unhappiness of the "190" to rich food, self-indulgence and the absence of the Ruhland. A case in point is the stillman-ness now in the New York courts. Why this can be so is told most interestingly in tomorrow's Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

OFFICIALS TO ATTEND INDUSTRIAL ARTS BALL

Political leaders of both sexes will be much in evidence at the Industrial Arts ball at the Copley-Plaza Monday evening. Among them will be Governor Cox, Mayor Peters, President Allen of the State Senate, State Treasurer Jackson, Senator David I. Walsh, Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, former Mayor Curley, Mrs. Anna C. W. Tillinghast of the Republican State Committee and Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald of the Democratic State Committee. Members of the leading clubs now playing Boston have reserved a number of boxes.

TRY TO BAR 'BRIGHT EYES' FROM HEALY'S HOTEL

They're trying to bar "Bright Eyes" from Healy's Hotel. "Bright Eyes" is a song; "they" are Waterman, Berlin & Snyder of New York, publishers of the song; and they have filed a bill in Federal Court to prevent the singing of the song in the defendant's hotel at No. 842 Washington street. The complainants allege the singing of the song by cabaret girls at Healy's is an infringement of their copyright. They seek to have the hotel proprietor restrained from having it sung any more, and they want $5 for every time it has been sung already.

SEAMEN'S WAGE SCALE SENT TO WASHINGTON

Wage cuts, elimination of pay for overtime and changes in the working rules proposed by the American Steamship Owners' Association have been submitted to the Shipping Board officials at Washington today for final action. Officers and crews of vessels here are watching the proceedings with great interest.

Stocks Go Down in New York and Boston

BEARS ATTACK DOHENY OIL ISSUES

Mexican Petroleum Shows Largest Loss During the Forenoon; Whole List Sags

By W. R. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon but above their lowest. Oils remained under pressure but showed some improvement. Steels got above their initial prices, Crucible recovering all it lost and showing a gain at the end of the morning. Rails were a little lower but were inactive as a class. The market rallied at the end of the morning. It has no outstanding feature. The price range ruled narrow. International Harvester advanced more than three points, however. Sumatra and American Sugar were among the weakest issues. Call money opened at 6½ per cent. Foreign exchange rates were steady, but demand sterling eased off a point on a cent to $4.32.

SMALL LOSSES AT START.

Stocks were offered at the opening in sufficient quantity to swamp buyers and initial prices went down a few points. Declines were fractional in most instances at the opening and for a while afterwards, but a few issues displayed a firm tone during the first hour recovered, but oils yielded without much resistance, particularly Mexican Petroleum. It showed four points before long, and Pan-American and Royal Dutch dropped more than one. Uncertainty as to what Mexican financing the Mexican Petroleum management may attempt in giving the bears a chance to raid that stock. Crucible was the weakest steel, and Reading showed the largest rail reversion. Tires dropped more than the average. Sears Roebuck continued to sag. Studebaker was the most active motor and also had the most support. Both International Harvester and United Drug advanced, but the latter did not long retain its gain. At the end of an hour the list looked better and a number of issues were above their opening figure. Steadiness of U. S. Steel attracted attention. It selling unchanged from its opening to midmorning.

HAMPERED BY UNCERTAINTY.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its comment on trade aspects throughout the country, says business is hampered by uncertainties. March showed little change from the February situation. Last month, it is added, it will not show much advance toward the restoration of normal conditions in banking and credit," the board says. "Liquidation has continued, with very little general recovery in the total amount of credit outstanding. Interest rates have shown little change during the month. An attitude of greater hopefulness on the part of the business community and on Pan-pression of opinion on the part of commercial leaders that distinct improvement in domestic conditions is in sight, represents a forecast rather than an analysis of actual tendencies, extent to which these expectations are warranted cannot be determined."

New York Money Rates

New York, April 1.—Call money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange today ruled steady; high, 7 per cent; low, 6½ per cent.

Motors Tire and Rubber Stocks

We have compiled and have ready for distribution an up-to-date and comprehensive resume of the Motor, Tire and Rubber stocks. The recent advances of these issues, ranging from 1¼ to 26¾ points, from 1921 lows, are clearly shown, together with explanatory data. Latest export figures, showing an encouraging improvement, are also cited.

Special features of this Motor, Tire and Rubber report are the grouped investment suggestions covering the leading stocks of these important industries. Approximate cost, indicated yield, dividend returns, price range for 1920 and 1921 to date, together with latest dependable statistics, have been carefully outlined.

The Boston American today prints the second in a series of nine articles, taken from the report of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland. These articles will appear daily and will give the report in detail.

Great Britain feared and sought to hinder the impartial investigation of affairs in Ireland by the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland.

The British government refused to vise passports of members of the commission, after they had been approved by the State Department.

Contrasted with this, Irish citizens testifying before the commission showed a "frank and dispassionate spirit," according to the report, which is being published in nine instalments in the Boston American.

ULSTER NOT HEARD FROM.

"Not one single Ulster Irish man and woman represented the Irish people that people has cause for pride in them," says the report.

Here is the second instalment:

"It must be pointed out that while the reports and documents gathered by the commission present the case of Ireland from diverse points of view, the direct testimony available was almost wholly from the Irish Republic viewpoint or from sources not sympathetic to the application of the principle of self-determination to Ireland.

"In other words, the Ulster Unionist viewpoint and that of British officialdom in Ireland, in spite of every earnest effort of the commission, were not represented among the witnesses. Diligent efforts were made to remedy this unfortunate defect.

"The commission planned, among other things, to send a sub-committee to England and Ireland, and it was arranged that in England this committee should consult every available source of British opinion on Ireland.

REGRET BRITAIN'S ACTION.

"Major Newman, Mr. Mauer and Dr. William MacDonald, the secretary of the commission, were selected for this mission, but after passports had been secured from the State Department the British government, through the embassy, refused vises.

"The commission regretted this action, not only because of its prejudicial effect against the British government on a large section of American opinion, but particularly because the first suggestion that the commission extend its inquiry to England and Ireland had come from British sources, from a group of the principal leaders in the Labor party.

"We wish to commend the frank and dispassionate spirit in which the Irish witnesses presented their testimony. They came to us in many cases under conditions of great personal inconvenience, or even danger. In so far as they represented the Irish people before the commission, that people has cause for pride in them.

"The central fact in the Irish situation is the presence of the British in Ireland. The British can point to 700 years of possession of Ireland and to 700 years spent in trying to pacify Ireland; and the British naturally desire to continue to possess Ireland, for they are proud of their empire, jealous of its integrity and anxious about its security.

REVIEWS ERIN'S LONG FIGHT.

"The Irish people from age to age, almost from generation to generation, have contested the right of the British in Ireland. Since the United States was liberated from the British Empire, the Irish people had asserted their natural right by arms on the following occasions: 1788, 1798, 1803, 1848 and 1867. These and 'constitutional' efforts won from the British Parliament the abolition of penal laws against Roman Catholics, the disestablishment of the Irish church, liberal land laws and, finally, the Irish Home Rule Act, which was passed by Lords and Commons and signed by the King in 1914.

At the behest of the British Tories, under the titular leadership of Sir Edward Carson, that act was forthwith suspended for the duration of the war, to which the Irish Nationalist leader, John Redmond, and his party gave their support. Later the act was rendered void by a superseding act which partitioned Ireland.

"To fight the home rule act, Sir Edward Carson's Tory lords had started the Ulster rebellion of 1914, armed the Ulsterites there, and set up a provisional government in Belfast. This insurrection was abetted by Lord French, and by Sir Henry Wilson, now of the Imperial British High Command.

CARSON ELEVATED.

"Thereafter Sir Edward Carson and the other leaders in the Ulster insurrection were promoted to high office in the Imperial British government.

"After this, in 1916, Irish poets, teachers and leaders, with less than 1,000 followers, rose in rebellion, and declared Ireland's independence. Confronted with the Irish Declaration of Independence, the Imperial British government poured additional troops into Ireland. The rebellion was crushed in April, 1916.

"The Imperial British government then continued to pour troops into Ireland. The Irish to an increasing degree were deprived of civil and social liberty. Such British rule lasted until December 14, 1918, when, at the conclusion of a war avowedly fought for the rights of small nations, the Irish people in the general election held under British auspices, gave the indorsement of their suffrage to the Irish republic which was the election issue in Ireland. In fulfillment of their pledge the elected representatives of the Irish republic met in Congress (Dail Eirann) at Dublin, organized as a government, nominated officers and proceeded to function (January 21, 1919). And an army known as the Irish republican army was created, equipped with distinctive uniforms, and drilled openly."

The report continues to describe the wave of violence that has swept over Ireland. Depicting the slaying of policemen, presumably by Sinn Feiners, the document says somewhat ironically that "it is generally conceded that the victims of executions by Irish republicans are never women or children, aged or infirm persons, or priests or ministers."

It winds up this phase of the Irish question by placing responsibility for the assassination wave upon the government, as follows:

"The commission, however, understands that the British government has not abandoned its claim to be the titular custodian of law, justice and order in Ireland. Political assassination especially in a country where ordinary murder is as uncommon as in Ireland is a phenomenon whose causes require investigation. It has therefore seemed of paramount importance to examine the means used by the British government to enforce whatever principles of justice it deems applicable to Ireland, and to ascertain, if possible, upon what principles this justice is grounded. For, if we accept the claim of Great Britain that it is in control of affairs in Ireland, we cannot escape the conclusion that the British government must accept responsibility for the deplorable conditions that have followed upon its attempts to maintain its authority."

DASHES THROUGH STREETS WITH CLOTHES AFIRE

Human Torch Sought in Vain by Police; Seize 15 Gallons of Alcohol

With clothing aflame, an unidentified man rushed madly through Commercial street, North End, and suddenly disappeared, a search for him by the police proving in vain.

Though apparently he must have been badly burned, he had not visited any doctors in the vicinity or applied at any hospital for treatment for his injuries.

His appearance gave the first warning of a fire in the basement of a six-story brick building at No. 472 Commercial street, where a damage of about $50 resulted.

Police officers visited the basement and seized fifteen gallons of alcohol and several empty cans.

Salvator Puccini, owner of the building, would give no explanation of the presence of the alcohol in the building. He said he rented the place to a man whose name he could not recall and he did not know to what use it was being put.

'HUGGER' BEATS WEYMOUTH WOMAN

Mysterious Braintree Attacker Makes Second Attack Upon Mrs. Colombe

Mrs. Rachel Colombe of No. 8 May street, East Weymouth, was again attacked and beaten unconscious near her home by a man answering the description of the Braintree "hugger," according to her story told to the police. She declared she was struck on the head with a club, but obtained a good view of her assailant before losing consciousness.

This was the twelfth attack on a woman reported to the police, and the news was suppressed for several days, in the hope of effecting an arrest.

The second attack was reported by Mrs. Colombe as having taken place March 23. She reported the first attack in February.

BROCKTON CAR RATES BEING CONSIDERED

Brockton, April 1.—A request by the public trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company to the local home rule committee to confer with them at an early date relative to the reduction of fares in the Brockton district has been received. George W. Alden, Major D. W. Packard of the committee, and Division Manager P. F. Sheehan are in Boston today for a conference with thes trustees.

Harvard's Murphys Are Given Scholarships

The Harvard Murphys are to collect. The committee in charge of the scholarships founded by the late W. S. Murphy of Boston, have just awarded several of them to students who bear the names of the donor, in accordance with the decree of his will.

Frederic J. Murphy of South Boston, a first-year student in the Graduate School of Education, Norman B. Murphy of Augusta, Ga., James B. Murphy of Cambridge, and Richard T. Murphy of Dorchester, are the recipients. Hugh C. Murphy, Jr., and John Murphy, who are to take the Harvard exams to enter next Fall will get these awards, providing they pass.

WEAK WOMEN

cannot hope ever to become strong and well again unless they have plenty of good, rich, red blood of the kind that arsenic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps make. Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings. Nuxated Iron does not injure the teeth nor upset the stomach; it is an entirely different thing from ordinary metallic iron. It quickly helps make rich, red blood, revitalize worn-out, exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using it. At all druggists. Beware of substitutes. The genuine has N. I. stamped on every tablet. Always insist on having the genuine.

Providence, R. I., April 1.—Jeremiah Scully, aged policeman, who formerly lived in Jewett City, Ct., but has no permanent home, is dying at the Rhode Island Hospital as the result of falling down a flight of stairs at No. 14 North Main street. The physicians have been unable to determine the nature of his injuries.

Rich Food and Self-Indulgence Cause of Society Scandals

Science has traced many of the divorces, infidelities and other unhappiness of the "400" to rich food, self-indulgence and the absence of the husband. A case in point is the Stillman case now in the New York courts. Why this can be so is told most interestingly in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Women Work Harder Than Men

It must be so because Uncle Sam says so. A recent investigation of the unit "horse-power" against "man-power" and "woman-power" has proven beyond a question of doubt that woman is the greatest worker of the two sexes. How it is worked out is told and illustrated in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Bugs Baer Tells How Gink Battled Steak

Dear Sir—Look upon the following and cringe. My man, One Round Steak, stopped Gink Fowler like a Blue Law stops fun. Gink's feet were the only thing that saved him. They were so fast that he could put his nose on the floor without bending his neck.

One Round Steak trained in Child's. And a tougher bird never broke a tooth. Yours,

E. V. KOVAC,
Chelsea, Mass.

Wow! That's the one that cracks the camel's wishbone. One Round Steak may have been a battler in Chelsea, but Roughtown changed his title to hash. Don't get Roughtown wrong. Jesse James came into that sweet little municipality one pleasant twilight, sneezing a gun with every finger and two with his thumb. The whole town turned out to watch him clown. Little babies laughed themselves into a relapse.

A posse of infants started ... Jesse and his band of terrorists and put a Buster Brown uniform on him. The toughest outlander in the world was only a laugh to Roughtown. They used to throw oil on fire. Arthur Golden's cobble was never stuff and crammed ribs and black eyes were decorations.

The fight between the champ of Roughtown and One Round Steak attracted people from all over the world. Fans trained in every way away to get in the act and Steak, a style of eating the battle was judged a connoisseur of a tournament fight. When the dinner bell rang Gink tore in with both hands, mouth and feet at the Broad Jump. Steak was never outfought. It was a frame-up. When the dinner bell rang Gink tumbled into a delicatessen and Steak found himself in a Kosher restaurant. Steak fought Gink off the knife and fought the Champ in the jaw. Gink fenced at him with his fork and grabbed Steak with his fingers. Steak fell on Gink every which way. Gink was battered full and famed. Steak, who showed pluck, was a game bird.

BOSTON BALL PARKS ARE INFESTED BY TIN HORN GAMBLERS

MAGNATES CAN STOP EVIL

Should Close Their Gates to Big Bookies and Bettors

By BLEACHERITE.

Major League magnates have agreed to try to suppress gambling in their ball parks this Spring, though no concerted plan of action has been agreed upon; that is an impossibility because of the varying laws against betting in different states. But all the moguls decided at the various Winter meetings that a real drive against the sure-thing boys was necessary for the preservation of the game.

Gambling, at least the pernicious form of it, can be stopped at professional baseball games. The big bettors can be run out of the parks. Whether they are or not is decidedly up to the owners. The latter may tell you that it is impossible to root out the tribe, but they are just talking when they do.

There are more than enough real baseball fans in every city to give the magnates what information they may need to get at the problem in the baseball books and the baseball pools. They cannot stop the wagering on the outside but they can keep it off their premises.

Boston is nationally known as the worst city in the large league for gambling. The practice has flourished and thrived here wonderfully from the beginning in our village the general epidemic grew.

The bookmaker, the tinhorn and others of the breed have plied their trade in unblushing effontery in the first base bleachers. Desultory assaults have been made to exile them, but none of the main actors have ever been caught in the net.

A few five-dollar bettors have been gathered in by plain clothes men and police officials, fined a little something, but that is all. The clubs, of course, have been handicapped because witnesses and actual passing of money, and things like that are necessary for conviction.

But the large gamblers, the professionals at it, pass money, make bets, quote odds and smilingly watch the smallest of their victims waltzed off in the more or less familiar patrol.

The remedy is simple; just close the gates on the big gamblers. Keep them out, and the smaller fry will make no difference. A few trifling bets will not hurt the game or tend to knock it down. So long as gambling isn't a business, nobody will notice it. So long as it is, baseball is in serious danger.

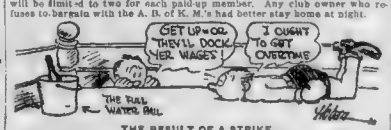
If the betting rings in the first base bleachers are wiped out, the interest in baseball gambling on a major scale will automatically cease. There will be some, but not enough to cause any real trouble. The players who may unconsciously help along the gamblers will not be bothered. The chaps who toss around the large money will have to find some other sport to muss up.

New Knuckle Mechanics' Union Will Break All Records for Strikes

By WALTER HOBAN

The Amalgamated Brotherhood of Knuckle Mechanics of Chicago has cooked up a union, just as if they were working men or actors. All the glove swingers in Chi held a meeting and voted to stand together and to take the count separately. They have affiliated themselves with the Fight Managers and Towel Swingers' Local No. 1, and will rig up a set of demands for larger percentages and shorter seconds.

It is understood that no help will be made for an eight-hour day, and that the full water pail will figure in the conferences with the club owners. A hair-stuffed workbench will also be among the claims, and black eyes will be limited to two for each paid-up member. Any club owner who refuses to bargain with the A. B. of K. M.'s had better stay home at night.



THE RESULT OF A STRIKE.

The leaders among the Queensberry journeymen will oppose any trick to pay the men piece work. A union rate of several thousand berries per evening will be submitted, and any employer who docks a guy's pay will be invited to the next meeting of the brotherhood. In no union fight will scabs be permitted.

Each thumper will carry his union card into the factory with him. It will be worn on the south side of his overalls, like a Hessian on a Prussian.

The bell at Mechanics Building will be given the air like an empty cup. No union laborer can work after hearing the merry chirp of the bell. A blast of that sort of music means quitting time.

He closed his boys. As soon as one of the brothers gets an ear full of the bell he drops whatever he's doing and eases himself homeward to the wife and kiddies. Whether a boxer will drop his opponent or his guard has not yet been decided.

ONE FOR THE ARBITRATION COMMITTEE

One of the beauties of the new union is that its members will do more striking than any other gang of toilers in the world. Every time a rosin kisser goes to work he strikes. If he didn't he'd be shoved into the aspective class and have his union card jerked away from him.

Of course, they will have to have union referees wearing union suits and clocking the thing with a union watch.

Scrappers will drape their belts with the Union Jack and the union label will be tatooed on every puncher's chest.

This far Jack Dempsey or Benny Leonard haven't sent in their initiation fee. In union there is strength, but not enough to stand up before those guys for more than a couple of non-union rounds.

TECH ENTERS 3 IN NATIONAL GAMES

MacMahon, Dandrow and Either Hayes or Brossard to Compete in Championships

Coach Frank Nanaly has decided to send three men to represent Tech at the National championships at the Harvard Stadium on April 9. The men will be MacMahon, Dandrow and either Hayes or Brossard.

MacMahon, who has entered the two mile run, distinguished himself by pulling himself third at the Penn relays last year, running against the English harriers. Dandrow is a three mile man and has been in first place in the Technology cross country runs. Hayes and Brossard are both freshmen who have been looking good in practice. Dandrow, who is entered in the national championships at Cambridge, is also entered in the Technology track field. One of these men will probably be George Dandrow, who is entered in the national championships at Cambridge.

WILLIAM J. (BILLY) SWEENEY

It was nearly a score of years ago that Bill Sweeney broke into organized baseball as a member of the Toledo, O., team of the American Association. From that team he went to Portland, Ore., in the coast league, and in 1907 he gained the goal of all ambitious baseball players—a contract with a major league team.

His career from that time on is well known to all but the very youngest of baseball fans of New England, for before the 1907 season was half completed, the Cubs—which team had secured Bill from Portland—traded him to the Boston National League team—then known as the Braves—and for seven years Bill played and for a considerable time captained the local team. In 1914 he returned again to the Cubs.

In the course of his career, Bill played every position in the infield and outfield, and upon quitting the leaguers served as a coach for college teams.

"Jack Twin" Declares Wilson Does Not Know Real Inside Stuff

By JACK CONWAY.

"I can beat Johnny Wilson!"

Jack (Twin) Sullivan made this statement in a nonchalant manner as he finished boxing ten fast rounds with several husky heavyweights at Technology.

"When I recently announced I was going to do a come-back, I was given the merry old laugh by a lot of persons who are supposed to know something about the boxing game," continued Jack Twin. "But I found seven would stepped forth and advertised a boxing season to George Robinson, who won over Wilson at Montreal. Then I stopped Joe Thomas.

Don't become frightened, Ferdinand. Those intermittent rumblings you hear do not portend an approaching thunderstorm. They are the waftings, thitherward, of the excessive bursts of applause that get each move in the Lasker-Capablanca chess tournament.

In fact, as we recall Arthur's comment on the work of Paddock at the Stadium, last July, it bore distinct traces of belittlement and the prognostications that the then existing sprint records were safe, in so far as Paddock was concerned.

Before we got the "low down" on it from Arthur's column we had arrived at the conclusion that certain individuals merely had combined against Johnson and Wilson with Lawson Robertson, and Johnny Mason, might have had something to do with Charley's lightning speed.

It will be remembered by those who saw Paddock in action that Johnson and Wilson were showing signs of tiring when Paddock was timed in Arthur's fleet performance.

Now, with a view of improving Arthur's standing as a Rabbit Maker and Johnson and Wilson's standing as Paddock beaters, appeared to be necessary for the Chronicler's comrade Paddock was the fastest man in the world.

Arthur made no comment on Paddock's praise of and credit to the volume at the time that less and credit was given.

LABOR RADICALS MEET TO PLAN FOR COLLEGE

Katonah, N. Y., April 1.—Labor leaders of the so-called "radical" or "advanced" stripe met here to discuss ways of founding a resident labor college for workingmen. Spokesmen for the conference said the labor college would be based on the theory that "a new social order was coming, and would be hastened by education."

HOUSEWIVES INTERESTED IN COMING EXPOSITION

Announcement of the Home Beautiful Exposition, to be held in Mechanics Building the last two weeks of next month, has brought out a flood of suggestions from makers throughout Massachusetts. Among these is one from Mrs. Lydia E. Ring, No. 19 Glen avenue, Arlington, who urges that the advantages of co-operative cooking be tried out at the exposition. She points out many advantages of such a plan in the lowering of costs for food and fuel, as well as eliminating an enormous amount of work. The exposition will make an extensive display of home articles, and there will be music by

FLEISCHMANN COMPANY DANCE HELD TONIGHT

Employes of the Fleischmann Company will hold their first annual dance in Paine Memorial Hall, this evening. Exhibition dances will be given by the Misses Blanche Hinde and Evelyn Sullivan. The services of Miss Jane Campbell, a very clever and fascinating toe dancer has also been secured. Music for a contest 1 to 2 and for the dancing 2 to 1 will be supplied by Hooley's Jazz Band.

Molding the Human Form

Audrey Munson, the most celebrated artists' model in this country, whose form and face has been reproduced in hundreds of beautiful statues, paintings and reliefs, tells what it means for a model to go through the ordeal of being enclosed in clay, that the actual lines of her body may be later cast in bronze or other metal. This story, plentifully illustrated, appears in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. (Magazine Section.)

This Day in History—April 1, 1921

THIS is the anniversary of the birth, in 1578, of Dr. William Harvey who first discovered the circulation of the blood. Ridiculed at first, he lived to see his doctrine accepted. He died in 1657.

The Sun at Mean Distance

MANY persons forget that from January to July the earth's distance from the sun increases. It is now at its mean value, being about 92,900,000 miles. It will be more than 700,000 miles greater by May 1.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued

"YES!" The inner pressures at last found an outlet in voice, gesture, blazing eye. "I mean just that! I won't touch Sir Timothy! I don't want ever to hear it spoken of again. Now get out and leave me alone!"

He slammed the door on them. The girl at the window looked after him, mildly surprised. Doors weren't slammed in the establishment of Holmes Hitt, Inc.

He loitered in the corridor. He must think Perfect Porcelain. He set his face; marched back dog-gedly.

Then, before the unruffled, momentarily exasperating Holmes Hitt he exploded.

"I don't care for advertising!" he cried. "It's debasing! It's vicious! Just because the wide reading of magazines and newspapers gives you a chance—because this new scheme of putting into people's minds the thing you want them to think——"

Without lifting an eyelid or shifting a foot, Holmes Hitt, at this point, surprisingly, dramatically, brought down a hand on the table with a bang.

"Now!" he said, with only a little more vigor than usual. "Now? My dear man, don't you know that advertising has been the greatest force in the world since life began! No! Why bless your heart! do you know who were the greatest advertising men in history? They were Alexander, Julius Caesar, Chengis Kahn, Peter the Great, Martin Luther, Ben Franklin . . . Caesar writes his own 'Commentaries'; puts them into every school in the civilized world. Why? Advertising! . . .

"Oh come! Those things aren't a parallel to this commercial——"

"Aren't they though! What's commercial? What's commerce? Selling things, isn't it? Suppose a man gives his life to building up a manufacturing business. Suppose he makes honest goods; believes they're the best. He wants people to know about them, doesn't he?"

"He wants their money."

"Money, nothing! He wants success, power, you. That's human. What does your soldier, your statesman, your reformer, your novelist, want? Success, fame, power! One man sells goods, another sells himself. What's the difference?"

Again the soft buzzer sounded.

"Yes, you," said Holmes Hitt, with a quizzical glance.

And again it was a woman's voice.

"It's Margie—Margie Daw—Henry. I want to see you."

"Well—I'm busy just now."

"Are you engaged for lunch?"

"For lunch—why, no, I don't think so."

"Well then, meet me—let's see, I don't want to go to Philippe's—I'll tell you! You're a millionaire now. Meet me at the Rivoli, at one."

He felt those steady eyes on him.

"It all comes down to thinking it," said Holmes Hitt. "And thinking it means wanting to do it. You can put Perfect Porcelain into six thousand homes if you want to. The question is, do you want to?"

"Yes," said Calverly, "I do."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"THEY'RE pounding you pretty hard, aren't they"—observed Margie. She looked fresh, pretty, more than usually boyish. The gaiety and clatter of the restaurant suited her today.

Calverly inclined his head. His sensitive mouth twitched. "But I don't care," he said. Holmes Hitt wouldn't have cared.

"That's hardly true, Henry. Of course you care. And you've got to do something about it."

"Work's the thing!" said he, with sudden emphasis.

"What work? Advertising business?"

He nodded.

She shook her head, firmly.

"It is. You don't know, Margie. How I've lived. It's practical life. It's the world. I've got to take my place in it."

Again her little head moved in a decided negative.

"What else?"

She nibbled at her salad; considered; finally leaned her elbow on the table and let her bright eyes rest thoughtfully on him.

"Henry, I've just learned—it's really why I called you up—that we've taken a Sunday syndicate story about you from the National Feature Service. The Sunday editor arranged it by wire this morning. It's going to be one of those hideous things—colored picture of Henry Calverly as a famous writer wearing a laurel wreath; another of Henry Calverly in a striped suit looking out between iron bars——"

He shivered. His eyes—she thought them like a dog's now—hung on hers. She knew she was torturing him.

"Yes, really. I was there when he ordered the drawings. The story is to dwell on the sensational ups and downs of your life."

His lips moved. She caught the one word:

"Please!"

"But we've got to consider this, Henry. It's a fact. The story's going all over the country. There'll be others. They'll pound you right down if you let them. The question is, What are you going to do? How are you going to meet it?"

He shaded his eyes with his hand. He was silent so long that she fell to eating again.

"I'll ignore it," she thought he said.

"But you can't, Henry!"

"I can. They can't touch my private life."

He faltered a little on this. They could and they would.

"You're going to make me speak plainly"——

"Why talk of it at all?"

"Perhaps I can help. I'd like to."

"Work," he said again—"I'll work it out, little by little."

She mused aloud. "Publicity is the greatest force in the world. The great dear public doesn't see straight and it never will. It's full of notions, can't. It's just got to have, all the time, its heroes and its monsters. People of course, are neither."

He turned toward the music; moodily watched the violinist; said something about the cheapness of these popular songs.

"When do you get the money, Henry?"

He shook his head.

"One or two years, I suppose. These things take time. Has the will been probated?"

No answer.

"You do get it, don't you, Henry?"

"Oh, please!" It was hardly more than a sigh.

A Long Silence

"You're awfully difficult. More than anybody else in the world you need a publicity man right now. Time is passing. You'd have to catch it right at the top of all this row. Maybe, even then, we couldn't do it. It's a chance. And, of course, if you won't help—against your will—I can't do a thing. I could if . . ."

She leaned across the table. Her voice dropped a little and softened. A warm glow spread through her body and brain. "Supposing it's hopeless, Henry, after all—supposing you just have to clear out again—I can't bear to think of your going alone. We might work it out together. You need a woman awfully to take care of you. And to work through you. I'd take a chance with you, Henry. My life isn't so much. I'd pack up and go—oh, anywhere! Africa, South America, China! It doesn't much matter where. It would be one more experience. There'd be a thrill in it. Perhaps that's what you need. I find . . . the way I feel about the little time you were at my place . . . I'm funny; some men I'd loathe, just seeing them around—you know, coats off—shaving—. Oh, I know all about it! I'm not a green little thing. I've been married. But I'm young enough. And I wouldn't set up claims on you—nothing—you make exactions—strike a hard bargain—like these innocent little marrying things."

Holmes Hitt exhibited no surprise over his disappearance the day before; merely studied him with calm, slightly amused eyes; then winked through the little heap of papers that Calverly placed before him. These held his interest. Once or twice he even nodded approvingly.

"This," he said, tapping them, "is a start. We'll go out to the factory today. I want you to see porcelain made. And I want you to talk with the workmen."

And so Henry Calverly was swept off his feet and into a current in which he had to exert every faculty to the utmost in order merely to keep afloat.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Oswald Quilters had been a quiet forces in the community for a decade or two. His easy, even light way of dismissing little difficulties, his suave, hard path over problems, made him early popular on club directorates. No one had ever seen him even momentarily nonplussed. He never talked lengthily or wasted time, except in pleasure. And back of him, like a mighty tower, loomed the wealth and political strength of Senator Painter.

Miriam became frightened when approached on the subject by Esther.

"Quilters is one of them! What shall I do?" she exclaimed to her self.

He told his employer that his old writing urge had returned and that he must write a book. He couldn't help it. So he resigned his job and sought Margie at the drug store. There was some talk of the money and Margie told him that the Watts lawyer had arrived in town. But, he insisted, he would not accept the fortune, would give it away first.

"Do you mean that?" asked Margie.

"Yes," he said.

"Give that money to the poor devils that have felt what you've felt—prison—disgrace!" she exclaimed. "Establish a fund. Yes, that's it! For men and women released from prison. Help them get a start, get back on their feet."

"Yes," he said slowly, "I'd love to do that."

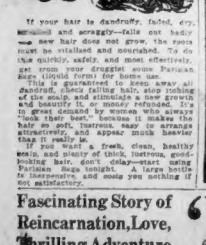
Girls! Have Beautiful Hair Like This

Lustreen Hair—Soft—Fluffy and Abundant—Attained by Applying Sage, the Wonderful Beautifier.



Really attractive hair possessing a witchery all its own is the wish of every woman. No uncared-for hair can be beautiful. Dandruff, tangled locks, powdered with dandruff, are a repulsive sight.

Hair so fascinating that it compels admiration is a matter of care.

If your hair is dandruffy, faded, dry, lustreless and scraggly—falls out easily—new hair does not grow, the roots must be vitalized and nourished. To do this quickly, safely and most effectually, get from your druggist some Parisian Sage (Imold form only). Use it.

This is guaranteed to keep away all dandruff, check falling hair, stop itching of the scalp, and stimulate a new growth and beauty to it, or money refunded. It's in great demand by women who always "look their best," because it makes the hair so soft, lustrous, easy to arrange attractively, and appear much heavier than it really is.

If you want a fresh, clean, healthy scalp, and plenty of thick, lustrous, good-looking hair, don't delay—start using Parisian Sage tonight. A large bottle is inexpensive and costs you nothing if not satisfactory.

Many a Brim Takes an Upward Turn in the Newest Hats

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"WELL, here we are, we three, as cozy as you please," said Dad Lee, settling back among the cushion of the car with an air of great satisfaction. "And now to make sure, I don't start out with no—any handicap from my loving daughter. Suppose you tell her, Hyland, how it was that I sacrificed myself all those years for her an' her mother."

Tell Her Alone

"Perhaps you'd better tell her yourself when you're alone," suggested Father Andrew gently.

"No! You go ahead; we ain't neither of us keen for the sob stuff," chirped my father.

"Wife desertion is an ugly thing, Habbie dear," said Father Andrew gently, seeking to read my thoughts and answer them. "But before we apply that name to your father's disappearing all those years ago we must be sure we understand just what he acted as he did. You can make up your mind that when a man goes off on the ends of the earth and leaves his wife it's for a reason almost beyond other people's understanding."

"Yes, I can understand that," I gasped.

Not Fair to Judge

"No, tain't fair to judge a man unless you're pretty sure of his reasons for how he acts," piped up Dad Lee, paraphrasing Father Andrew's idea with great satisfaction. "And I'm anxious to explain, so you and the swell gentleman you married won't hold a grudge against an old man who always meant well."

"If you feel there's anything you want me to understand," I replied gayly, "why not tell me over the lunch table? People can always talk better over the coffee cups, I think. And I'll explain to Jim later."

"That'll be fine," agree the prodigal father. "Probably it'll be easier for me to talk before you my dear, and a plain man like Hyland here than to that swell young man of yours. And I'm just about ready for some ham and eggs and a couple of crullers. Is there a nice hash-house near by?"

"There's a restaurant near here," I replied. "But I told Jim I'd have to turn back to a quiet little place in a side street. As we drove along I thought about Virginia, who had none too easy a time adjusting herself to me or even to dear, simple Father Andrew.

To Endure Lucky

How would she force herself to endure "Lucky Lee," poor old ex-gambler, to whom the niceties of life were a mystery? If Father Andrew's steadying hand hadn't been over mine I think in those first busy hours of adjustment I'd have found myself crying out some of the protests which were in my mind as well as in my heart.

"You aren't my father," I wanted to shout. "You can't be! Fate wouldn't play such a cruel joke on me just when I'm enduring the terrible separation from him and all the torturing uncertainty of his whereabouts."

After we were established in a quiet corner with food before us Dad Lee seemed more inclined to give his attention to his "Hans and" —as he called it—than to the story he had promised to tell me. Indeed, it took several reminders before he could be persuaded to talk, and then he didn't get fairly launched until he had finished his coffee, pushed back the cup and had folded his thin arms on the table in front of him.

"Purty fair food—purty fair," he began. "M'dear, I don't suppose you recollect what slim pickin's we sometimes had back in the old times?"

"Yes, I remember," I said, noticing as I spoke that my voice was almost sullen.

"We used to be rich when the ponies ran right. Then you an' her had the fat of the land. High steppers, you was then. Nothing was too good for you. Remember?" he asked again anxiously.

"They was a bad spell. A year or so when nothing broke right. Then I got together everything I could beg or borrow and went off to a big meet. I had some good dope—tips I was sure of, and I thought I'd come back rich. But I didn't make a killing. Guess I was in wrong with the chaps who was touting for the big ones. There I was, down and out. I was kinder sick about it anyhow. And when I got to thinking about going on seeing my wife and little one suffer, I couldn't stand up to it. But I didn't see a way out at first. Then I started home. Where you was waiting, wasn't you, daughter?"

"Yes, we were waiting," I said. "But you won. You wrote us that you won."

To Protect Mother.

"I wrote you that I won," broke in the thin voice—"sure I did. That was to protect your dead mother. I thought I'd find a way to save her from knowing that we was beggars—and I did. I couldn't bear to have her know that I'd been clean busted."

The arrant selfishness of it made me shiver, but he went on in quiet certainty and with what seemed also triumph:

"Fate came into the game and gimme my way out. The train we was riding on got shivered to bits. I come out whole, but I finds a chap about my size who's got his, and that puts me in mind of the insurance money my littlest would get if it's me that makes my last book 'stead of him. Right then I sees my way to lay a bet for Martha and my little Anne. I changes clothes with the corpse. Takin' the few dollars in his pockets, I sets out a homeless tramp.

"It weren't easy to do, but I felt it was right. It gave you and my Martha your chance, m'dear. And when I heard a few years later that Martha had found a kind, good man to look out for her I felt I'd doped things out right; and excepting for one thing I'd have finished my life satisfied, sittin' in a lonely old age and sufferin' and dyin' alone like a dawg. But when I heard that I made up my mind 'twere my duty to seek you out. I felt you needed your dad, even if he was only poor old 'Lucky Lee.'"

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

NO time is wholly idle, however you seek to shirk; you may not wear a bridle, but you are sure to work. Some people toil at digging to keep the wolf away, while some are busy rigging themselves in venture gay. No man is constituted like jelly-fish or sloth, though it can't be disputed he sometimes acts like both! By empty days confronted, he wears a gloomy face so he has always hunted some way to fill each spaces. When it's unnecessary to drive for bread and cheese, he hunts the causeway or sails the Arctic seas. And when he is not hustling to scare the wolf away, he's just as busy hustling at something he calls play. When empty days are staring a feller in the eye, he finds them mighty wearing and longs to make them fly. He must be up and doing, for prove he's not asleep; thus trouble starts to brewing, for folks are much like sheep. They do things that are silly; they do things that are dull; they do them willy-nilly, because days must be full. That's why with honest labor he should fill up our ways, for no man or his neighbor can stand for empty days!

"For Love"

An Absorbing Romance By Ruby M. Ayres

PART II.—Continued

PETER colored a little.

"Do you mean Miss Arlington—Kitty Arlington?"

"Kitty—that was the name, of course . . ." Calligan had been frowning slightly, but now suddenly he chuckled. "Do you know I rather thought Phil was a bit struck in that quarter at one time!"

Peter had thought so, too, but he was not going to admit it.

They had almost reached Kitty's house now, and Peter stopped. "I've got to pay a call here. Good-by for the present."

Calligan nodded and walked off thoughtfully.

"Kitty!" That was the girl, of course. He remembered uncomfortably how on many occasions Philip had given him the slip in order to go to her. It was not so very long ago, either, now one came to think of it—August, July, June. Only about three months ago. He turned into a little shop to buy some tobacco.

"By the way," he said, casually, as he was leaving, "which is the Arlingtons' house — can you tell me?"

The woman came to the door and pointed it out—the very house into which Peter had gone a few moments ago.

"Well, I'll be dashed!" said Calligan, disgustedly.

He was not so sure now that he liked Hester Dennison particularly, after all.

Eva's phrophecy with regard to the wedding was not so far out, after all, for two days after her marriage the sun suddenly drew the clouds about its face and torrents of rain descended on New York.

The Winterdicks took their meals downstairs now with the rest of the hotel visitors. They sat at a little table in a window and talked platitudes for the benefit of the waiter or anyone else who might be at hand; as if—so Eva told herself bitterly—they had been married for years and years!

Since that first night Philip had made no effort to allude again to their estrangement. He was always courteous and kind, always willing to do anything she wished, but his attentions were those of an ordinary acquaintance. Whether his real feelings were he hid them admirably, and Eva told herself grimly that she had not believed in his sincerity when he pleaded so passionately for another chance. If he showed she had been right to refuse to listen, seeing that he had so soon apparently got over his disappointment.

She did not understand that it was because her tormentors and hers were so deep that other attempts were absolutely impossible to him. He only knew his desire now was to hide from her how much he cared.

Stared from Window

He went into the living-room; he sat down straddle-ways on a chair and stared out of the window.

The rain was pouring down steadily, the big drops splashed back from the pavement in diminutive fountains.

Philip crossed his arms on the chair back and rested his chin on them.

If they were only back at home, perhaps things might improve, he thought hopefully; more than once he had thought of suggesting to Eva that they go back, but he did not believe she would consent. They had started on a three weeks' honeymoon, and so far only three days of it had gone.

He bowed his head on his arms in utter weariness of heart and soul; for the first time in his happy life Philip Winterdick honestly wished himself dead.

"Philip. . . ."

He started guiltily and turned; his wife stood behind him.

He got to his feet clumsily; he hated himself for having let her see his despondency.

"I thought you were out," he said stupidly.

"No." She glanced toward the window and the cheerless street, and suddenly she said: "Philip—can't we go home?"

"Home?" His face flushed eagerly. "Do you mean it?"

"Yes—I don't like New York—I've never hated any place so much in my life; I hate this hotel. . . ." Her voice quivered; she bit her lip hard to steady herself.

He laughed mirthlessly.

"We're agreed in that, at any rate," he said. He looked at her silently for a moment. "When do you want to go?" he said.

"As soon as possible—tomorrow, perhaps."

"Very well; I'll tell them here." He half turned to the door. He never dared trust himself alone with her, but a thought suddenly struck him, and he stopped looking back at her.

"You will come with me to the Highway House, of course?" he said stiffly.

No Need of That

There was a little silence.

"Surely there is no need for that?" she said then, in a low voice. "I can go home. . . . I would much rather go home."

"If you prefer it we will go there, certainly," he said, purposely misunderstanding her.

She looked at him with startled eyes.

"I don't want to make plans for you; I want you to be quite free. Your people will like to have you."

Philip's sombre eyes flamed.

"If I go to my people you will come with me," he said obstinately. "If you insist on going to yours, I shall come with you. I have given in to you so far, but I will not have a public scandal. You understand."

For a moment she did not answer; then she broke out angrily:

"Then I will stay here—that is all; I will stay here."

He shrugged his shoulders.

More Telephone Dividends

Pity the Glove Makers, Etc.

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company announced recently that it had increased its regular dividend to 9 per cent. Very comforting to the stockholders. In a few days, when the company increases its rates about 30 per cent. it ought to make the increase dividend easy.

If some of the old Americans could come back they would be amazed to find how calmly this generation takes taxation without representation. There are in the United States thirty corporations each of which taxes the people of this country in a way that King George never dreamed of.

But perhaps it is all for the best. We live in an industrial age and industry must be encouraged.

Wages, foreign competition and the low exchange rate of foreign money make up a hard problem for American business men. For instance, take the glove industry, at Grenoble, the French centre of glove making, where 25,000 people manufacture 800,000 dozen pairs of gloves per year, the employers are complaining bitterly about increased wages.

Before the war, workers, making gloves at home, were paid from one and a half to two and a half francs per dozen. Now they get twelve francs a dozen, that is the French problem.

Here in the United States it costs twice as much merely to CUT the gloves, as it costs to make them in France, and here it costs EIGHT times as much to make them, for the labor alone, as it costs in France.

And the French are in despair because German labor and the price of German gloves are so much below the French cost.

That is a pleasant prospect for the American glove maker, and a problem for the United States tariff maker.

The London Morning Post denounces Northcliffe as an Irishman, because Northcliffe's newspapers express sympathy for the Irish. Northcliffe's mother it is true, was an Irishwoman, and an admirable Irishwoman who gave him much of his genius and power. But Northcliffe does at least as much for England as for Ireland, in trying to solve the Irish question justly.

The history of England would be different, but for the Irish blood, in the sons of Irishwomen, working at English problems. It was a lucky thing, on a famous occasion, that there was a man of Irish blood named Wellington to lead the English. And one of the worst things that ever happened to the Irish was the fact that they were led by an English King at the battle of the Boyne, while the English were led by a Dutchman.

George Knight, a negro, drank gin, then killed the first white woman he met. "Jersey justice" convicted him in fifteen minutes, and will kill him in the electric chair about the first of May.

Those that sold the gin, that made the negro commit the murder, have been arrested and released on bail. Why? "Jersey justice" knows that selling gin to that negro is what killed the white woman and the sellers of the gin are at least as guilty as the negro whose powerful hands strangled the woman.

It is announced, on doubtful authority, that Lenin will pay to the United States "$200,000,000 lent to Kerensky and thus end the trouble between the United States and Russia." Kerensky did not get $200,000,000. Some gentleman in Wall street got from the United States Government the par value of Russian notes that, of themselves, were not worth the paper they were written on. Some American soldiers were killed in Russia and Siberia and a great many millions sent in a foolish effort to get back money lent to the Russian Czar by ignorant American bankers. President Harding may decide it is time to wipe all that nonsense off the slate.

Counting the Cost of War; What Have We to Show?

From the dawn of the first year of the Christian era to the present day, 60,597,244,800 seconds of time will have elapsed.

The part they took in the recent war seems likely to cost the American people from a dollar and a half to a dollar and three-quarters for each of those seconds.

Take pencil and paper and jot down these entries:

Our war debt plus our $10,000,000,000 foreign loans make roundly $35,000,000,000. The chances are slight that any of us will live to see those foreign loans repaid. In which event, we shall have to pay the $35,000,000,000 ourselves.

By the time this shall be done the interest will have equaled the principal, making $70,000,000,000.

There are other costs. There is a wage loss of at least $2,000,000,000 in the normal average earning power of our 5,000,000 enlisted men over what the government paid them while in service.

You can add a loss of $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 incurred by them in getting restored to normal earning power after their discharge.

Capitalize the value of the lives lost; allow for the care which our 600,000, more or less, disabled service men will need during the remainder of their lives, and you will get a great sum—perhaps $10,000,000,000.

Then figure the aggregate burden of war-caused high prices on those Americans whose incomes did not rise proportionally. Of course you cannot do this accurately, but the best guess will be tremendous—perhaps as much as $15,000,000,000.

Here, then, are a hundred billions of war cost; a sum which, if it had been spent on internal education and material improvements, would have made our America a wonderland.

What have we to show for it?

Restricted liberties, reaction and depression, the worry of extreme taxation and democracy not a bit safer either at home or abroad!

Is it surprising that the entrance of a new regime into national control under pledge to stop these wasteful foreign loans, reduce as speedily as possible this burden of taxes and debt and bring our republic back to its old independence and freedom, is awaited with eager expectancy by an overwhelming majority of our people?

More Truth Than Poetry

"Ain't It An Awful World?"

By S. E. KISER

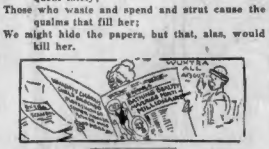
"LAND o' Goodness! Mercy sakes!" Aunt Eliza screeches;
"See the trouble money makes everywhere it reaches!
Young girls marryin' old men—ain't it simply awful?
How can folks be hopeful when things like that are lawful?

"Some new scandal every day; it's a shame and pity;
Thank the Lord I'm far away from the wicked city!
Seems that everybody there must have lost their senses;
Plungin' down without a care; nothin' but pretences!

"What's the world a-coming to? Ain't there no salvation?
Neither wives nor husbands true; where's their reputations?
Girls don't seem to want to hear what the world is sayin;
Nothin' ever seems too dear at the price they're payin'.

"Old men turnin' from their wives, or, unless detected,
Leadin' sinful double lives, more or less respected.
Ain't it awful? Mercy me! Money and position,
Then the next step seems to be downward to perdition!"

Aunt Eliza's in distress; she is always greatly
Shocked by people's naughtiness—shocks are frequent lately;
Those who waste and spend and strut cause the qualms that fill her;
We might hide the papers, but that, alas, would kill her.



THE COAL MEN HAVE ALL THE LUCK

BEATING IT WESTWARD, March 29.

DEAR EDITOR.
THERE'S a line
OF GUY Bates Post
IN "THE Masquerader."
THAT COMES to me.
WHEN I start West.
"OUT OF the fog.
"BACK INTO the fog."
BUT THEY'RE different fogs.
MR. EDITOR.
THE ONE is the rush.
AND THE crowd.
THAT FOGS my brain.
WHEN I stay too long.
IN THE busy East.
AND THE other fog.
IS THE silvery thing.
THAT BRINGS its tears.
FROM OUT of the sea.
THROUGH THE Golden Gate.
AND COOLS my blood.
AND HEALS my aches.
AND SO it is.
I'VE TURNED my face.
AND AM looking West.

TO THIS other fog.
AND WHILE I'm gone.
MR. EDITOR.
I'LL FIND my way.
TO THE foothill ranch.
WHERE THE old dog "Shep."
AND THE young dog "Tip."
WATCH OUT for me.
AND THEY'LL be there.
TO BARK their joy.
FOR WE are friends.
AND WITH these two.
AND A little boy.
NOW THREE years old.
WHO WON'T recall.
THAT I'VE been there.
SINCE HE first came.
WE'LL WANDER down.
TO OLD Rock Creek.
WHERE GOLD was washed.
IN '49.
AND WITH the ghosts.
OF THOSE wild days.
WE'LL GAMBOL.
ON THE mounds they left.

I THANK you.

Letters to the Editor

Boston Traffic Squad

Editor Boston American:

As a motorist and a regular reader of the Boston American, I wish to protest against a criticism, both unfair and unwarranted, against the Boston traffic squad of the Police Department that appeared in a Boston paper last Saturday. This article criticized the efficiency and the method of signaling now used by the traffic squad, suggested that it be changed, and that whistle signals be substituted. The signals now in use by the traffic squad are uniform and easily understood, and given with great efficiency by a squad which is at least the equal, if not the superior, of any like organization in this country.

Motorists familiar with traffic conditions in large cities of the United States appreciate the difficulty met with by the Boston traffic squad in handling the downtown traffic because of the narrow crooked streets, narrow sidewalks, the many vehicles, pedestrians and the congestion resulting therefrom. If motorists would watch the traffic officers, and not pay attention to shop windows and pedestrians, there would be less trouble.

I for one hope there will not be any attempt to change traffic signals, and I believe that the unjust criticism of the traffic squad should be resented. We have a squad in Boston that is extremely efficient and courteous, and it should be commended and supported instead of criticized.

Wit and Wisdom

THE HINDERING FEAR

If no one had reason to fear,
When inclined to be cutting wild capers,
That his name might, some morning, appear
In tall and black type in the papers,
There is many a gray hypocrite
Who would cease mighty soon to be careful,
Having no further reason to sit
On Sundays with those who are prayerful.

WHAT IS AN EDUCATED MAN? 6 TESTS

By The Spectator.

THE President of Columbia University at a recent college assembly gave six tests of an educated man.

Reduced to simple language they are as follows:

FIRST—Correct Language.

Language is the expression of life. It is not merely an artificial set of signs and sounds for communicating ideas.

One's words are a picture of his thoughts. If his mind is muddy and confused his speech will show it.

SECOND—Gentle Manners.

This does not mean learning drawing room and dinner tricks, for one may bow correctly and always sip his soup silently from the side of the spoon and yet be a boor.

Means Self-Respect

It means such a bearing as indicates self-respect, independence of spirit and courage, together with a constant regard for other people's rights and feelings.

THIRD—Good Taste.

Perhaps this is the supreme test. For your ultimate claim to being an educated person depends upon the sort of things you like.

You are not necessarily educated when you read good books, you are only educated when you like to read good books.

FOURTH—Reflection.

That is turning things over in your mind.

The ignorant judge by jumps. They receive and respond to impressions easily.

In the educated mind every new idea must have time to incubate.

Then when one speaks, his judgment is mature and in agreement with common sense.

Always Learning

FIFTH—Growth.

The educated man is always learning. He has learned to love learning. It is his food. He is wretched without it.

SIXTH—The Power to Translate Thoughts Into Concrete Action.

Ignorant people think quite as much as educated people. The trouble is their thoughts have no aim, no goal, no disciplined procedure.

To the educated man the ideal flows easily into the practical. He makes the word flesh.

He learns by doing, and his thinking takes form in deed.

These are standards that may be helpful in measuring ourselves.

MOON HELPS SUN MAKE EARTH SWAY

By Edgar L. Larkin,

Director Mt. Lowe Observatory.

THE ends of the imaginary axis of the earth traverse a circle in the north and another in the south every 25,878 years around the pole of the earth's orbit. The diameter of these circles is dependent upon the obliquity of the ecliptic which is the angle between the planes of the orbit of the earth and the equator of the earth—for 1921 this is 27 degrees 27 minutes 8.16 seconds of arc.

That is, if the ends of the earth's axis were pencils and celestial vault paper, the northern and southern circles would be traced around the poles of the orbit traversed by the earth around the sun.

Like Peg Top

This gyratory motion of the axis of the earth, like the wobbling motion of a spinning peg top, is caused by the attraction of the sun and moon on the ring of matter 13 1-2 miles deep, around the equator of the earth, which ring corresponds to the heavy ring of a revolving gyroscope.

But the relative positions of the sun and moon vary incessantly, and the moon causes monthly a nodding called nutation of the earth's axis. These two motions must be measured and allowed for with the most astonishing accuracy in refined parallax work. For the precise place in space of the plane of the earth's equator must be known, for the places of all visible suns are based upon this invaluable plane as a plane of reference. Variations in latitude, of heat and cold, of the atmosphere and others must be determined.

Great Precision

And there the line of collimation of the lenses of the transit telescope must be placed in the absolute meridian with a precision equal to the diameter of a spider's thread. If this is finally accomplished the horizontal axis of the telescope is then parallel with the earth's equator.

The lives of working astronomers are much occupied in locating the equator, and now it is known with a precision not dreamed of by early astronomers. But its place changes incessantly, so the rate of change has to be known with extreme accuracy if star distances are ever to be measured.

THAT OLD FRIEND.

Some friend of your family or friend of your former years has met with reverses and because of old age or inability to work has had to go to an institution of public care, and because of this you have ceased to pay any attention to him.

You show a most unchristian-like spirit.

Hours and hours at a time this unfortunate person thinks of brighter days in the past.

He remembers those he supposed were his friends and morbidly compares their successes with his apparent failure, perhaps through no fault of his own.

What a lot of sunshine and pleasure you might bring to the life of this man if you would write to him or call on his occasionally.

It is a little thing for you to do, but think how much courage and help it would be to the one shut away from active outside life.

Just because your friend or acquaintance has failed in some particular is no reason why you should pull away from him.

Help him up and incidentally you will be a better man for it, you will find a big reaction in your own life from the light you cast on others.

Stars and Stripes

Trouble wouldn't seem to come so fast if people didn't go half way to meet it.

They who read only popular books dress the mind after the fashion, without regard to either health or growth.

Faults invariably do us harm, but he who knows his own knows that which will do him good.

The tongue that drips honeyed words, like the bee, conceals a sting.

A university is a little knowledge, surrounded by walls of stone and mountains of dignity.

When we speed cheerfulness we scatter seed that grow in their own warmth and sunlight.

You never know that some men are boosters until they tell you so.

It doesn't follow that the man who makes the most speeches has the most sense.
